SAN FRANCISCO.

This is the last week of The Whirl of the Town, Aug. 14-21, at Fischer's, and next the new burlesque will be presented and is to be called Anheuser Push. It is written by Will Carleton and Lee Johnson, and is said to be more than funny. It is to have many new features in the way of stage settings and songs and dances, and, best of all, it is to bring back to us the most popular soubrette this theatre has ever had—Georgie O'Ramey. She has been doing vaudeville in the East since she left here some months ago, and so great has been the demand for her return that when the house had a vacancy they immediately wired Miss O'Ramey to come at once. So we have much to look forward to at Fischer's on Monday night next.

The Toreador is still filling the Tivoli Aug. 14-21. It is now in its third week, and the end is not nearly in sight. Miss Condon's singing of the song "My Toreador" is one of the big hits of the opera. Her voice is so charming and fresh and of such rich quality that there is little wonder of her popularity. The delight of the show is the singing of "My Susie Anna" by dainty little Carrie Reynolds. Not alone can she sing, but she scores big with her dancing. Mary Young is as dainty and pretty as she can be, and has quite won the hearts of the patrons by the singing of her two catchy songs. Bessie Tannehill is a picture in her beautiful gowns, and as the rich widow shows her fine talents in the clever comedy work. Dora de Fillippe always sings well and receives many encores. Forest Dabney Carr, the new basso, has a fine, big, rich voice. The work of Melville Ellis still has much to do with the success of the performance. Teddy Eebb is as funny as ever, and Willard Sims makes a big hit in his imitations. Mr. Kennedy, William Schuster, George Chapman, Mr. Fogarty, Carl Formes, and Charles Kendell are also in the cast.

The Walters co. Aug. 14-21 at the California are presenting the melodrama Just Before Dawn. It is the right kind, the sort that draws the big houses and has been no exception this week. The players have not been better cast during the season than in this play. Stanley Johns, the new leading man, who made an instant success upon his first appearance last week, made a capital hero. Harry von Meter was cast as the villian and was sufficiently vicious. Lloyd Ingraham was seen as the old gardener and scored a hit. Agnes Williams was very acceptable as the daughter of the rich mine owner. In the cast were Harry Llewellyn, Harry Todd, Alfredo Galari, Theresa Walters, Zoe Elgie, Maude Monroe, and Elmer Walters. Next week, for the last week, The Man of Mystery. And then comes Florence Roberts and an excellent co., including Hobart Bosworth and Lucien Henderson. The opening play will be Tess of the D'Urbervilles.

Henry Miller and Hilda Spong Aug. 14-21 are still playing Joseph Entangled at the Columbia. This is the last week of the Miller season, which has been unusually short this year. The play, which is by Henry Arthur Jones, has had its first American presentation at this house, and judging from its success here it will no doubt be one of the season's hits in New York. Miss Spong is delightfully suited to the part of Lady Vera, and has captured her audiences by her agreeable naturalness and charm of personality. Mr. Miller made a great impression in the role of the fascinating bachelor. No doubt the other members of the co. will be in the New York cast, for they are all well placed. Arnold Daly in Candida comes next.

James Neill at the Grand Opera House Aug. 14-21 has the rattling good comedy The Lottery of Love. This is the first time this play has been given at popular prices, and it has been the best thing Neill has given us this season, with perhaps the exception of The Parisian Romance. Mr. Neill is capital as the muchly married man, and Edith Chapman does some good work as the wife with two husbands. John W. Burton, as the father of wife No. 2, was exceedingly funny. Lillian Andrews can always be looked to for something original and her portrayal of the mother-in-law was up to her usual high mark. Others in the cast were Sheldon Lewis, Donald Bowles, Philip Lord, George Bloomquist, M. Cytron, Katherine Gilamn, and Francis Slosson. Next week's offering will be Held by the Enemy.

Theodore Kremer has written many good melodramas, but the best thing he has yet given us was the play presented at the Central Aug. 15-22, for Her Children's Sake, a comedy-drama with some very strong situations. It must be a satisfaction for writers to know that our clever Central Stock co. is to present one of their plays, for where is there a theatre where plays are better presented than at this house? Where are there better actors, a better theatre or better stage settings? To Hersall Mayall was intrusted the leading male role, and Ethel Clifton, the new leading lady, made an instantaneous hit. Edna Elsemere and Julia Blanc had good roles and greatly pleased. George Webster, as the country circus owner; James Corrigan, as the coachman, and Ernest Howell, as the spendthrift, were admirable in their separate roles. Frank Thompson, Ollie Cooper, Baby Martine, and Hazel Buckley were also in the cast.

White Whittlesey's season at the Alcazar continues the acme of success, both from a financial and artistic standpoint. This week's bill was the revival of last season's success, Hall Caine's Manxman. No play that Mr. Whittlesey has put on this season has shown him to a better advantage, nor has any play brought out the different phases of strong emotion that this has. Sterling Lord Whitney, an actor new to the Alcazar stage, made a delightful impression and will no doubt become very popular with the patrons. Mr. Conness, Mr. Maher, and Mr. Osbourne all had good roles. Miss Lawton, as Kate, gave a very charming touch to the part. Marie Howe made an interesting Auntie. The stage settings were particularly attractive, and to Fred Butler goes much praise for his earnest work. Next week The Pride of Jenico.

OSCAR SIDNEY FRANK.

MILWAUKEE.

Are You a Mason made a great hit at the Academy Aug. 22. One of the largest Monday night houses of the season greeted the production, and the gales of laughter that swept through the audience during the entire show attested to the enjoyability of the performance. The hearty appreciation of the play led one to believe that the house was filled with lodge members. The chief disturbers in the fun factory were Albert Brown, J. Kyrle MacCurdy, Irving Brooks, Colin Campbell, and Kate Woods Fiske. Albert Brown in the character of Amos Bloodgood, the old man that had successfully for twenty years led his wife to believe him a Mason, was at his best, his rendition of the part being decidedly the best thing in the performance. J. Kyrle MacCurdy was very good in his female impersonation, his efforts causing shrieks of laughter, especially from the feminine portion of the audience. Irving Brooks's portrayal of the old time actor compelled by reverses to act as usher in a music hall was one of the funniest things in the performance. Mace Greenleaf, as Frank Perry, the young married man who gets into trouble while his wife is away, did not have much opportunity, but what he had to do was done well. Kate Woods Fiske, as Mrs. Bloodgood, gave the finished performance usual to her. Colin Campbell, the gentleman from the country desirous of joining the Masons, happened in at the right time to keep the fun going. Grace May Lamkin made a very charming appearance as Mrs. Perry. The Misses Parry, Allison, and Hastings contributed their share, and the other minor roles were acceptably taken. The play moved with a snap and vigor that was decidedly refreshing, and reflects credit on Mr. Platt, the stage-manager. The scenery was adequate, one set sufficing for the three acts. The performance, as a whole, was very good, and is well worth seeing by those who desire a hearty laugh.

Riley Chamberlin and wife left 22 for New York city. Mr. Chamberlin was the oldest member of the Thanhouser co. in point of service, and left to join Proctor's Fifth Avenue Theatre Stock co.

Lee Baker and Edith Evelyn, his wife, have returned from a Summer's sojourn in Southern California, and report a very pleasant vacation. Mr. Baker will make his reappearance with the Thanhouser co. in Blue Jeans, and Miss Evelyn will return to her position as leading lady of the same co. in When Knighthood Was in Flower. A very cordial reception is awaiting both of them, as the patrons of the Academy have anxiously awaited their return.

The Le Roy French Peck's Bad Boy co. are in the city, and several of the members are rehearsing with the Thanhouser co. preparatory to the joint production at the Academy of Peck's Bad Boy 29-4.

The members of Our New Minister co., the first attraction at the Bijou, are in the city preparing for the opening 28.

The Alhambra will open its doors 28 with Out of the Fold as the first attraction. With the opening of the Bijou and Alhambra the English theatrical season will be in full blast, with one exception, the Davidson opening with Ben Hur 5. The management of the Pabst Theatre have not as yet announced their opening.

Ellery's Band at the Exposition is drawing large crowds at every performance, the new leader, Ferullo, with his wild gyrations, attracting a great many who otherwise would not attend; nevertheless the character and rendition of the various selections are greatly appreciated and enjoyed by the music lovers.

The Kilties' Band closed a successful engagement at Schlitz Park 20, with the annual Scotch picnic. Despite the weather conditions, the attendance at Pabst Park has been good, the German Marine Band rendering a very pleasing programme.

C. L. N. Norrie, the regular correspondent, and wife are taking an outing for a few weeks.

A. L. ROBINSON.

LOUISVILLE.

The Stain of Guilt, a melodrama written by Walter S. Matthews, of this city, drew large audiences at the Avenue Aug. 21-27. In pathos, comedy and thrilling incidents this successful play compares favorably with others of its kind. For His Brother's Crime opens 28.

At the New Masonic Selma Herman in Maurice J. Fielding's Wedded, but No Wife, found suitable vehicle for the exploitation of her marked ability as an emotional actress. The engagement lasts 22-24 and will be followed by Darkest Russia.

The successful season of Jockey Club Park under the management of James B. Camp closes 27, and the genial manager is to be congratulated upon the extensive addition to his bank roll as result of his venture.

The river excursion to be given by Louisville Lodge of Elks, No. 8, 25, will attract a large crowd. The musical and vaudeville features of the programme will be high class in every particular.

Manager John T. Macauley has returned from New York to supervise with the aid of Business-Manager Crovo the finishing touches to the extensive changes made at the beautiful little Macauley playhouse. The season will open at Macauley's about the middle of September. Manager Macauley announces that he has secured a very fine booking, including many of the best of the traveling attractions.

Frank Root will act as treasurer for Kurkamp's Twenty-second Regiment New York Band during the remainder of the season. The band goes from here to Knoxville, Tenn., and will fill engagements at several other of the larger points in the South.

Hopkins' High Class Vaudeville House will open 4. The architect, V. P. Collins, has transformed what was formerly Music Hall into an up to date place of amusement, and is to be congratulated upon his work. William Reichman will be resident manager, and it is given out that he will be aided by many of the old force who were with the Hopkins house in the Masonic Temple when it was burned.

Friends are pleased with the announcement that Kate Ray, a former Louisville girl, and a representative Southern beauty, has been engaged to play an important part in the Big Two Orphans co.

Harry Cuscaden and his sister Stella leave 25 for Philadelphia, where they play leading parts in the operetta, Titania, given under the management of Katie Strauss, of this city. The music is said to be of excellent quality and is the composition of Margaret Ward Bell, well known in Louisville musical circles.

On account of broken train schedule and alleged bad treatment in the equipment furnished in making trip to Louisville, the management of the A Girl of the Streets co., which recently appeared at the Avenue, has brought suit against a railroad entering Louisville for a large amount, claiming damages due not only for delay and discomfort, but as consequence of the railroad's neglect they were unable to give satisfactory performance of their production and thereby prevented their arranging satisfactory booking with other houses in the circuit of which the Avenue is a member.

CHARLES D. CLARKE.

DETROIT.

A numerous and appreciative audience gathered at Detroit Opera House Aug. 21 to listen to one of the best concerts Creatore has given in our city, and this means no reflection on those that have preceded it. A more suitable place could not have been chosen, since Detroit does not boast a much needed music hall or similar place for holding concerts, as the acoustic properties of the Detroit Opera House are excellent.

Charles Benson, of this city, has signed with B. C. Whitney to play the double role of Tybalt and Paris in Romeo and Juliet, which will open in Port Huron Aug. 25.

The Lyceum Theatre opened for the season Aug. 18 with Field's Minstrels and a big audience was on hand to greet them. They gave a very finished performance, considering that Detroit comes almost at the beginning of their tour, and while it is very much like all other minstrel shows that have come and gone, there is an abundance of new business incorporated which gives it an air of newness. The Evolution of Minstrelsy, which opens, discloses A. G. Field and the inimitable Billy Clark, who dispense some new jokes and catchy conversations, and singing by Reese Prosser, Tom McKenna, John Healy, and Albert Tint. The olio is made up of John Pearrie, Harry Ernest, John Healy, and B. S. Carnes, a lively quartette who keep up their end of the mirth provoking proceedings; the Two Avalos, in acrobatic features; Cornalli and Eddie, in jugglery that could be improved upon; Doc Quigley, in dancing; O'Dell, Reardon, Rogers and Herbert, in The Head Waiters, and Billy Clark, in an irresistible monologue and songs of the day that convulsed his audience.

The latest edition of The Show Girl came to Lyceum Theatre for a week's stay Aug. 21. It is of more than passing interest, being produced by B. C. Whitney, proprietor of the Detroit Opera House, and numbers in the cast many of our local talent. It does not require much guessing as to why it has been so great a success, for it is a bright, tuneful concoction, teeming with wit and appeals to theatregoers of all ages. Great improvement is noticed in the general make-up of the performance, new songs and dances have been introduced, and with special scenery and attractive costumes make it more entertaining than ever. Hilda Thomas, as Meg Webbington, was a pronounced success. She is new here, and a woman of experience and judgment. Lou Hall, as Johnnie Jones, won instant favor, and is very clever in the specialty work in Act 2 with Miss Thomas. At the Old Cross Roads Aug. 28-Sept. 3.

The first local presentation of Queen of the White Slaves was given at the Whitney Theatre Aug. 21-27 and played to crowded houses. Arthur J. Lamb has certainly reached the limit in sensational melodramas, for this is about the worst specimen we have encountered. Its plot is new certainly, and concerns the abduction of a young girl by a band of highbinders known as the Terrible Nine. The scenery is uncommon and weird enough to suit the tastes of the impressionable Whitneyites. The situations are so farfetched as to be little appreciated by the more thoughtful theatregoers, but it must be admitted it was well acted and the cast in the main are capable, numbering Alfred Britton, J. E. Miltern, Joseph Carter, Edward Nannery, George R. Raymond, Don Orr, Edward Robinson, May Southward, Ada Lane, Anna Yale, Rose Braham, and Aileen May. Across the Pacific is the next booking.

A. FRANCIS.

SPRINGFIELD, MASS.

The big theatrical news of the week was the leasing for ten years of the Grand Opera House by Sylvester Z. Poli, who has theatres in New Haven, Bridgeport, Hartford and Waterbury, Conn. The Grand, which is owned by Andrew A. Whitney and his son George, of this city and Fitchburg, has been run mostly as a burlesque house for four seasons, and the latter, who was active in the management, proposed to make it a vaudeville house this season, the Nelson Theatre having secured the "wheel" burlesque shows.

Mr. Poli's decision, however, relieved him of this responsibility, and also secures the remodeling of the house. The Connecticut manager will rebuild it entirely inside, making it a ground floor house, and says that no expense will be spared to make it a first-class house in every detail. Theatre Architect E. W. Maynard was on the ground the day after deal was closed and work will begin at once, the plan being to open by or before Nov. 1. This house will make a Poli circuit of five cities, and the fact that this enterprising manager has made a success in each city he has added to his string augurs well for Poli's Theatre in Springfield. The Whitneys offered to build him a new house on their property on West Worthington Street, close to the post office, but he preferred to take the old house, as he said he had had his best luck with old houses remodeled. Mr. Poli's entrance will undoubtedly ginger up the theatrical situation here, for in giving 10, 20, 30 vaudeville he will revive a form of entertainment that for various reasons has gone to seed in this town.

Within two years the Whitneys will doubtless build a new house on the site above spoken of for first-class attractions.

Corse Payton's Brooklyn Theatre co. finished their successful fortnight Aug. 27, giving the same repertory as the first week, with the addition of Camille. Etta Reed held a reception Friday, at which the ladies were fed and lemonaded and given the glad hand.

The Nelson opens Aug. 29 with the Blue Ribbon Girls, followed by Sam T. Jack's Burlesquers the last half of the week.

Owing to unlooked for delay in carrying out the alterations required by the State building inspectors the opening of the new Gilmore, set for Aug. 29 with The Game of Life, has been indefinitely postponed.

Immediate bookings at the Court Square are the West Minstrels (matinee and night) 31, Shore Acres Sept. 1, The Beauty Doctor 7, Shadows of a Great City 9, An English Daisy 12, Robert Fitzsimmons 13, Daniel Sully 14, Hoity-Toity 15, Marie Wainwright in Twelfth Night 17, all-star cast in Two Orphans 20-23.

Eddie Cartier, long connected with the Nelson and New Gilmore, has rejoined The Smart Set co., which he was with all last season as stage carpenter, at an advanced salary.

Carroll B. Mayon, of the Court Square Theatre, accompanied by his trusty box of cigarettes, is passing a week on his yacht on the Sound.

EDWIN DWIGHT.

DENVER.

The present season has been a most prosperous one at the Summer resorts. Walter Clarke Bellows has furnished some very good cos. at Elitch's Gardens in the past five or six years, but his co. this year has broken all records. It is doubtful if another city in the United States can boast of a Summer stock co. comprising such well-known people as Harry Woodruff, Frederick Perry, Bruce McRae, Theodore Roberts, J. H. Gilmour, Thomas MacLarnie, May Buckley, Julia Stuart, Agnes Ardeck, Helen Tracy, Nellette Reed, Edward Mackay, Grant Stewart, Frederick Bond, Joseph Kaufman, Emmett Shackelford, John Sumner, and Harry Willard. The visiting stars have been Amelia Bingham, Maude Fealy, Edwin Arden, and Orrin Johnson. Mrs. Mary Elitch-Long added many outdoor attractions this season which have proven money makers.

During the week of Aug. 21-27 a splendid production of A Japanese Nightingale will be given at Elitch's, with Orrin Johnson, May Buckley, and Edward Mackay of the original cast.

The Broadway Theatre Stock co. (Peter McCourt, manager) closed a successful twelve weeks' engagement 14. Gloriana was the last week's bill. In the name part Katherine Grey was not at her best. She never forgot for a moment that she was playing in a farce-comedy, nor did she allow her audience to forget that she was acting. She looked beautiful. Robert Drouet was surprisingly good as Count Evitoff—surprisingly because the part was rather out of his line. But he played it capitally. Janet Ford, Walter Thomas, Spottiswood Aitken, Myrtle May, and George Christie all did clever work, not only in this play, but in every one that has been presented during the season. Charles Hallack and Emily Wakeman were out of the bill, and were immediately engaged to finish the season at Elitch's Gardens.

The regular season at the Broadway opened Thursday night, 18-20, with Ethel Barrymore as Cousin Kate. Miss Barrymore made a great personal hit. She is remarkably magnetic. Bruce McRae, as Heath Desmond, was enthusiastically received, for he became a great favorite through his clever work at Elitch's up to the time he joined Miss Barrymore. Grant Stewart was also well received for the same reason. Kyrie Bellew 22-27. The Wizard of Oz 4-10.

Manager A. R. Pelton has spent the Summer months in having his New Curtis Theatre remodeled, as it was partially destroyed by fire last May. It is now in splendid condition, and opened to a packed house Saturday night, 20-27, with Fiddle-De-Dee. Mr. Pelton will continue to present Weber and Field's burlesques as long as they please his patrons.

The Orpheum will reopen 3. The Mabee Grand Opera House will reopen Aug. 29 with Eva Lang in Under Two Flags.

York State Folks, that most enjoyable of pastoral plays, held the boards at the Grand 21-27, where it played to good business. The play has been seen here several times before, but is an exceptional one of its kind and never fails to draw well. Ray L. Royce and James Lackaye still head the co., which is kept up to its original excellent standard. New Stage settings and accessories add greatly to the appearance of the production. Pretty Peggy 28-3. The Girl from Dixie 4-10.

Ethel Barrymore in Cousin Kate will open the Willis Wood Aug. 25, playing three nights and a matinee. There was a long line in waiting the morning of 22 when the box-office opened and a large advance sale was recorded during the day. Everything is in readiness for the opening, and the occasion promises to be an auspicious one, marking as it does the opening of the third season, to the day, at this theatre. The management presented the first thousand purchasers of tickets with handsome little leather ticket cases, which should prove very convenient to the regular theatregoer. The Woodward and Burgess Amusement co. continue as managers of the theatre, with Walter Sanford as business-manager. There are two changes in the box-office this season, Harry H. Tallman, formerly of Elitch's Gardens, Denver, is treasurer, and Claude Harbaugh, formerly of the Auditorium staff, is assistant treasurer. John Behr will again have charge of the orchestra, and Ted Allen remains as doorman and head usher.

The Auditorium will open its season 28 with a rollicking farce comedy, entitled A Friend of the Family, as the attraction. William Warran will be business-manager of the house for Woodward and Burgess, with Arthur P. Keel as treasurer, and Lynn Sanderson as assistant treasurer, the same positions they occupied last season. Thelma is announced as the second week's attraction, to be followed by a very good line of productions.

The Banda Rossa played their seventh week at Electric Park 21-27 to the usual large crowds. The moving pictures of the Passion Play shown during the band's playing of Father Perosi's Resurrection of Christ was a novel idea that met with great favor. The general park attractions enjoyed the usual large patronage.

Forest Park had its usual crowds of pleasure seekers 21-27 that found much to entertain them in the varied amusements offered. Concerts in the Japanese Tea Garden were well attended and business at the theatre was good as usual.

The annual Jackson County Fair will be held at Lee's Summit 13-16. D. KEEDY CAMPBELL.

ST. PAUL.

On Saturday, Aug. 20, the Grand Opera House was crowded to capacity by a brilliant and appreciative audience, largely composed of ladies, to witness the farewell matinee performance of the Fawcett Stock co. in a very creditable presentation of Rip Van Winkle. Percy Haswell's little daughter, Margaret Fawcett, in the role of little Meenie Winkle, was clever, natural and graceful, and captivated the audience. Miss Margaret was the recipient of a number of floral offerings. The Fawcett Stock co., one of the best that has been seen at the Grand for some time, closed with the evening performance a successful and very satisfactory Summer season. The co. was well balanced, and each member offered very creditable work. There is a warm welcome ever awaiting Percy Haswell, George Fawcett, and their excellent co. from the theatregoers in St. Paul.

The regular Fall and Winter season was opened at the Grand by an excellent presentation of In Old Kentucky on its twelfth tour, with a new dress of scenery and stage accessories 21-27, inaugurating a Sunday matinee performance. In Old Kentucky was given its first presentation on any stage at this theatre twelve years ago. Its popularity was fully demonstrated in the crowded house and the applause. Rapley Holmes was excellent as Colonel Sandusky Doolittle, contributing a breezy, spontaneous portrayal. Nellie Callahan was an attractive and pleasing Madge Brierly. Her naturalness, dialect, and enunciation were a delight, and she won pronounced favor. Otis Turner gave a thoroughly convincing impersonation of Uncle Neb. His make-up, facial expression and unfailing emphasis of speech was a distinctly good feature. Scott Higgins won marked favor in the role of Joe Lorey. George Mitchell offered strong work as Horace Holton. John Tyrrell offered excellent work as Frank Layson, also May Anderson as Althea Layson, and Mary Holmes as Barbara Holton. Creditable work was done by Charles Randall, James Hill, John Powell, William Pennell. The co. gave a very satisfactory performance. Tilly Olson 28-3.

The Barnum and Bailey Great Shows entertained immense crowds afternoon and evening performances 23.

The regular season of the Metropolitan Opera House will be opened by Chauncey Olcott 25.

GEORGE H. COLGRAVE.

INDIANAPOLIS.

The Stain of Guilt, with an evenly balanced co., including Gilbert Tossick, William Dolan, Florence Leslie, Marion Hyde, and others, was the bill at the Park Aug. 18-20. A Working Girl's Wrongs opened 22-24 to crowded houses. It is a melodrama of the stirring order. The part of Jack Fallon, the hero, was well played by Will W. Crimans, who is an Indianapolis actor of ability. Harry N. Barker made a good villian. Other parts were well played by Augustine Glassmire, Phil Gastrock, Helen Warren, and Evelyn Forbes. For His Brother's Crime 25-27.

Manager Ad. F. Miller, of English's, arrived in the city 23 from Columbus, O., where he has been spending the Summer. Mr. Miller is here preparing for the opening of the theatre 29, when Al. G. Field's Minstrels will be the attraction. The house staff of English's will remain the same as last season. William Leary will be treasurer and Patrick Brown doorkeeper. Following the Field's Minstrels comes an illustrated lecture on Japan, by Hector Fuller, 31. Ethel Barrymore in Cousin Kate 3, and then the house will probably be dark until State Fair week, when Ben Hur will be put on from 12 to 24.

The Kilties' Band is playing every afternoon and evening at Fair Bank this week to large audiences. Probably no organization that has visited this resort has met with such warm applause as was accorded each number at the opening concert.

The staff on the "News" gave a dinner 20 at the Grand Hotel in honor of Hector Fuller, of the editorial staff, who has just returned to this city from the Far East, where he won renown as a war correspondent After dinner Mr. Fuller gave a stereoptican talk on Japan. Mr. Fuller has resumed his old position on the "News."

The Indianapolis Elks will give their annual outing to the orphans of the city at Riverside Park 24. The children will be furnished free transportation, lunch, and a good time generally.

Henry M. Talbott and his wife have returned from their Summer home, at Minocqua, Wis.

PEARL KIRKWOOD.

JERSEY CITY.

Why Girls Leave Home is the alluring title of the attraction at the Bijou Theatre Aug. 22-27 to fine business. The matinee 24 was very big, composed almost exclusively of women and young misses. The play is full of exciting incidents and climaxes, and goes with a dash from beginning to end. The plot is interesting and exciting. There is plenty of good comedy interspersed in the five acts and the play teaches a lesson, although the title is the most pronounced feature. It is handsomely put on the stage and the co. is a good one. John J. McCowan is the leading man. He is a good actor and handled the part in such a manner as to receive curtain calls. Frederick Harris, as the male villain, and Anna Marie Schaeffer, as Dolly Fletcher, the female schemer, were hissed every time they appeared. They played the parts for all they were worth. Walter B. Gilbert and Edith French had the comedy. Mr. Gilbert was fine and Miss French was fair. Phillips Smalley, as the police captain, was excellent, as was Katherine Sherry as the mother. Florence Lois Weber, as the courtesan, was strong. Della Clark, as Pearl Sherwood, the girl who left home, worked hard with a disagreeable character. The small parts were well played. Joe Welch in The Peddler 29-3. The Lighthouse by the Sea 5-10.

The Academy of Music opens season 29. Alone in the world will be the attraction 29-3. Wedded and Parted 5-10.

Charles Diaz, property man of the Bijou Theatre, has made all the props for Shadows of a Great City, which opens the season Sept. 1 at Glens Falls, N. Y. Sadie Connolly will succeed Annie Ward Tiffany as Biddie Ronan. A number of specialties will be introduced in the play. Joe M. Breel will again be props with the show.

Christie A. Naumann has returned to the Academy of Music as assistant treasurer, after a pleasant Summer season at the Park Theatre, Bayonne.

WALTER C. SMITH.

BUFFALO.

Lew Dockstader and his minstrel co. were the attraction at the Star Theatre Aug. 22-27. The co. includes several well-known singers and comedians—namely, Nell O'Brien, Carroll Johnson, Manuel Romain, Matt Keefe, William McDonald, James B. Bradley, Leighton and Leighton. Business was good throughout the engagement. Next attraction, Rogers Brothers in Paris.

The Baldwin-Melville co. presented The Cowboy and the Lady at the Teck 22-27 with three new people in the leading parts. They were James Durkin, who succeeds Mr. Farnum as leading man; Bertha Creighton, who takes Miss Moore's place, the latter leaving for the Baldwin co. in New Orleans, and Bessie Johnson, a graduate of the Buffalo High School of '93. Immediately after finishing her course of study in the high school Miss Johnson entered the Ludlam Dramatic School in Philadelphia. As Madge she is given an opportunity to do some very creditable work, and she does it well. The other members of the co. carry their parts in their usual satisfactory and pleasing style. In preparation, When Knighthood Was in Flower.

Darkest Russia was the opening attraction of the Lyceum Theatre 22-27. This play has all the elements that go to make up a good dramatic creation. It is interesting from beginning to end. The presenting co. is excellent, and includes Eva Mountford, Lucille Loring, who scored a triumph as Baroness Von Rhineberg, and Edward Maynard.

Patrice in Driven from Home packed them in at the Academy 22-27. She is ably supported by John Hymer and Elinor Kent and a good co. of players.

William Farnum, supported by Agnes Hart, appeared at Shea's Theatre 22-27 in a playlet by Emmet Corrigan, entitled Birds of a Feather.

P. T. O'CONNOR.

MONTREAL.

The Theatre Francais opened as a burlesque house Aug. 22 to capacity. There was not an available inch of space that was not crowded. The attraction was the Knickerbocker Burlesquers in Reily's Speech. The show is a good specimen of the kind which goes on amusing the patrons of burlesque houses season in and season out. The scenery and costumes were new, the girls pretty, and the production excellent. The specialties were fair, and Frank Finney, the comedian, was certainly funny and worked hard. The balance of the co. did all that was required of them, and some of the dancing was particularly good. Australian Extravaganza co. 29-3.

The well-known drama by Octave Feuillet, The Romance of a Poor Young Man, is the bill at the National 22-27. It is a good play all round. Next week Paul Cazeneuve will take his farewell of the National, with the fortunes of which he has been so long connected, and leave for Quebec the week after. For this week, 29-3, the bill will be Richelieu, Mr. Cazeneuve appearing as the Cardinal.

Maud Everard, who did such capable work at the National last season, sailed for her home in Paris, from New York, on board the "Gascoigne."

The Academy opens 29 with Two Little Sailor Boys and His Majesty's with Lulu Glaser in A Madcap Princess. Both theatres have been redecorated and improved, and a fine new entrance built to His Majesty's. The Theatre Francais has also been much improved by the introduction of a number of private boxes.

W. A. TREMAYNE.

PROVIDENCE.

The Albee Stock co. at Keith's Aug. 22-27 had very good houses, with His Excellency the Governor as the attraction. The piece abounds in amusing complications and was presented by the members of the co. in a way that was highly enjoyable. The stage setting, with its East Indian effect, was very pretty and reflected great credit on Percy Winter. John Craig as Captain Carew and Lillian Laurence as Stella de Gex had comedy roles which fitted them perfectly. The Governor was portrayed by Frank Losee, and although the part was a little out of his line, he used it to good advantage and brought out all the comedy there was in it. Edwin Nicander as the Governor's Secretary gave another clever character sketch, which was very well done. Elizabeth Woodson was charming as Ethel Carlton. The best of support was given by William F. Owen, Helen Reimer, Francis Byrne, Percy Winter, George Fisher, and Robert C. Turner. 7-20-8 29-3.

At the Empire Theatre 22-27 The Female Detectives was given by the Russell Brothers to good houses. The bulk of the work fell to the Russell Brothers, who enliven the plot with their eccentric roles. During the final act they introduced their former success, The Irish Servant Girls, and made a decided hit. The scenes are bright, the costumes attractive, and a crowd of pretty girls adds to the general effect. The Way of the Transgressor 29-3.

HOWARD S. RIPLEY, per C. F. KRESS.

MINNEAPOLIS.

The Lyceum Theatre rang with laughter all week Aug. 21-27, the occasion being the production of Augustin Daly's great comedy success, A Night Off. This play has always tickled the popular fancy and will ever prove an attractive offering when handled so ably as it was by the Ferris Stock co. It was well staged, and each member of the cast handled his or her part with credit. Charles C. Burnham made a distinct hit as Justinian Babbitt. He played the part as if he had been doing nothing else for months, and his every move or gesture was greeted with hearty laughter. Ben Johnson was an excellent Marcus Brutus Snap. He looked and acted the part of a sure enough barnstormer. Oscar Grey Briggs offered commendable work as Harry Damask, while Lewis Stone was seen to advantage as Jack Mulberry. Ernest Fisher was a good Prowl. Lawrence Barbour did well as Lord Mulberry. Laurette Allen was a most consistent domestic tyrant in the role of Mrs. Zantippa Babbitt. Claudia Lucas made a dainty Nisbe. Lovell Alice Taylor contributed much to the success of the piece as Angelica Damask. Grace Hull offered creditable work as Susan. Miss Gordon Priest was a pretty Maria. Thelma 28-3. Pudd'nhead Wilson 4-10.

The Metropolitan Opera House opens 29-3 with 'Way Down East. The Bijou Opera House opens 28-3 with In Old Kentucky.

CHARLES M. LANE.

OMAHA.

The Woodward Stock co. had a very successful week's engagement at the Boyd Aug. 14-20, and the old favorites in the co. received a hearty welcome from their many Omaha admirers. This house has been open right through the Summer season and opened for the regular season 21, 22 with The Burgomaster. In spite of, or perhaps because of, the fact that this is the eight engagement of this comedy in Omaha during the past five years, the attendance and enthusiasm has not flagged. In fact, it seems to be on the increase. Manager Burgess announces Ethel Barrymore 23, Caught in the Web 28, The Wizard of Oz 1-3, By Right of Sword 4-6, The Tenderfoot 8-10.

Charles S. Breed has been appointed local manager of the Krug by Managers Hudson Judah, Stair and Havlin. Mr. Breed has been associated with the William A. Brady enterprises for the past nine years. Too Proud to Beg was the offering 21-24, the house being crowded at both Sunday performances. As usual the piece met with a hearty reception, the Boylan children coming in for a large share of the applause. An Orphan's Prayer 25-27. York State Folks 28-31.

At the Summer resorts, Krug Park and Cortland Beach business continues excellent, especially on Sundays, and will likely continue so until frost comes.

J. R. RINGWALT.

NEW ORLEANS.

Walter Edwards and his competent co. for their third week at Athletic Park Aug. 21-27 presented Camille in a satisfactory manner. Jane Wheatley assumed the title-role and displayed considerable dramatic ability. As Armand Duval, Walter Edwards was an impassionate lover, and his splendid endeavors of the two previous weeks were repeated. Frank Sylvester, Marion Lorne, and Louise Lander were prominent in the cast. Others in the cast were Richard Cochrane, Joseph O'Meara, Herbert Curtis, Florence Noah, and Virginia Kinsley. The attendance has been very good, which the capability of the co. justifies. The concerts preceding the theatrical performance, the miniature railway, and the merry-go-round are all attractive and paying features of this resort.

A cast of competent amateurs presented The Agitatorf at Elysium Theatre 22-24 for the benefit of a labor union now on a strike. The sentiment actuating this benefit performance was an incentive for a crowded house.

J. M. QUINTERO.

TOLEDO.

On the Suwance River opened Burt's season Sunday, Aug. 21. The cast is just as strong this season as it has been in past years. Laura Bennett plays the part of Aunt Lindy. Her specialty was coon songs, which were well received. Several members of the co. are recognized as old favorites, particularly Allan Bailey and Theodore T. Rook.

The Brigadiers opened the Empire 21 with Edmond Hays in the title-role of The Wise Guy. The sketch, which Hays has presented here in the past in vaudeville houses, has been enlarged upon and improved. Jack Symonds contributes a monologue that is more than clever. The Four Nelsons in acrobatic stunts take the house by storm. Sunday night they were called before the curtain about a dozen times.

C. M. EDSON, per E. EVERS.

SEATTLE.

The Weldemann co. at the Alcazar gave A Western Judge and Charley's Aunt Aug. 7-13 and The Steam Laundry and The Hand of Fate 14-20. All four plays were well put on and pleased the patrons. Uncle Tom's Cabin 21-27 will be the first play under the new policy of the co. to give one play a week. Hazel Kirke 28-3.

The Third Avenue will reopen 21 for the season of 1904-1905 with the James Keane co. for the week in Fabio Romani, A Runaway Match 28-3.

The Grand Opera House and Seattle are both dark.

Arthur Byron, who is a very clever comedian, had a capital part, to which he did full justice. Eugene A. Eberle and Mortimer Wilson were excellent. Charlotte Walker as the wife and Katherine Keys as the girl from the Cairo harem pleased the audience immensely. MAUDE FEALY'S LOVING CUP.

Herewith is a picture of the loving cup presented to Maude Fealy by the members of the Bellows Stock company, Denver, in which during the Summer she was very successful as leading woman. THE MIRROR last week gave some account of the roles in which Miss Fealy appeared in Denver, in all of which she won the admiration of her audiences and her associates. The loving cup was presented to Miss Fealy by Governor Peabody, of Colorado, whose attendance on the occasion of her final performance suggested the social success of her engagement in Denver, as well as its professional success. The Denver newspapers were enthusiastic in their attention to Miss Fealy during her engagement, on the closing night of which more than 1,600 people were turned away from Elitch's Garden, unable to get places. While the loving cup is built along massive lines, it is graceful and simple in design and bears the folowing inscription: "Presented to Maude Fealy, with the love and admiration of her associates in the Bellows company and the management of Elitch's Gardens." Miss Fealy and her mother have arrived in London to prepare for the engagement with Sir Henry Irving, during which this talented young actress will appear as Fair Rosamond in Becket, as Norah Brewster in Waterloo, and in other leading roles in support of that distinguished actor.

Miss Aurie Dagwell, for the first time in three years, will sing a ballad, and, for the occasion, has chosen "Down in the Vale of Shenandoah."

Baby Eleanore, the wonderful child soprano, is featuring "For Sale, a Baby."

Miss Mabelle Adams will introduce "Down in the Vale of Shenandoah" throughout her vaudeville engagements, playing same upon her violin.

Miss May Taylor is creating a sensation with "Good-bye, My Lady Love;" "Come Take a Trip in My Airship," and "Just a Gleam of Heaven in Her Eyes."

"Come Take a Trip in My Airship" is being sung and featured this week at Keith's Theatre, New York City, by the composer, Geo. Evans, who is receiving a dozen encores nightly.

"For Sale, a Baby," looks like another "Always in the Way."

"Just a Gleam of Heaven in Her Eyes" is being featured by Pauline Hall.

J. Royer West, of Van Sicien and West, is playing and singing "Come Take a Trip in My Airship," accompanied upon the 'cello.

Louise Harner, who is featured with the More to Be Pitied than Scorned company, is singing Williams and Van Alstyne's new march song success, "Farewell, Nellie Mine."

Jewell's Manikins are scoring a big success, performing curious antics and comicalities to the scintillating music published by Leo Feist, including "Strolling 'Long the Pike," "She's the Pride and the Pet of the Lane," "I Ain't Got No Time," "Zenobie," "My Little Zu-oo-oo-lu," "Black-Eyed Sue," and "Billy."

"When You Said Yes," Oscar Hammerstein's ballad, which is now being sung at the Victoria Roof-Garden by Eleanor Falk, promises to be one of the high class ballad hits of the season. His new waltz song, "Lizzie O'Connor," is often whistled by the audience as they are leaving the theatre.

George Taggart has written the words and Maxwell Silver the music for a new ballad. "She's One of the Girls from Home," which will be published soon by F. A. Mills. It promises to prove a decided novelty.

Paul Rubens, who wrote "The Three Little Maids" and the words and music of "She Was a Miller's Daughter," has written several songs for The School Girl, including "A Real Town Lady," "The Darlings of the Guards," "Florrie," "The Old English Cake-Walk," and "Jolly Little Japs."

A noticeable trait in the character of the composer, Alfred Solman, is his modesty in calling attention to the excellent rendition of his songs and his praise of the artists. Six of his numbers on the Madison Square Roof, however, are among those that command applause, particularly "In Sweet Loveland," "The Girl with the Changeable Eyes" and "Twinkle, Little Star."

A feature of Blaney's More to Be Pitied Than Scorned company is the singing of "My Black Eyed Sue" by Gracelyn Whitehouse, supported by the entire chorus.

The Pioneer Publishing Company announces that it has in press a new story-ballad that is destined to have a great vogue. It is entitled "Behind Bars of Gold," and was written by Cremer and Jones.

Charles F. Ernst reports a wonderful increase in popularity of his ballad, "I Long to See Them All Again." The army of singers now using this song write in glowing terms of its success everywhere.

Williams and van Alstyne's march song, "Farewell, Nellie Mine," is gaining many new friends, and looks like a winner.

Bryan and Mullen's novelty song, "Pepita Maguire," the Spanish-Hibernian oddity, is a big hit with performers, as well as with the audiences that applaud it.

William H. Anstead's novel song, "There'll Be Nothing But Sweet Dreams" has been added to the repertoire of a dozen well-known singers during the past week. This song has struck the popular fancy.

Maurice Darcy, who scored heavily with The Prince of Pilsen and Piff, Paff, Pouf, is now playing numerous dates in vaudeville and is featuring "If You're in Love, Say Cuckoo," published by Falter Brothers.

Dolly Jarvis, Ethel Williams, and Clara Turner, of the Clara Turner company, are meeting with great success singing Frederick W. Falter's novelty song, "If You're in Love, Say Cuckoo."

May Irwin will introduce Harry Brown and Chris Smith's great coon shout, "Dat Ain't Nothin' But Talk," early in September.

"Good Night, Miss Emmaline," a coon song serenade by Andrew B. Sterling and Harry L. Newman, is now ready for the profession. The above songs are published by Falter Brothers.

Verne Armstrong's Missouri song, "On the Farm in Old Missouri," received many encores in three New York theatres last week.

George E. Fossik writes that his new song, "When de Dew Was on de Clover," published by W. H. Willis and Company, Cincinnati, is being eagerly sought by good singers.

The Faulkner Publishing Company, of Kane, Pa., offer their campaign hit, "Roosevelt and Fairbanks March," free to orchestra leaders for thirty days. All house-leaders should take advantage of this offer.

Dilger and Cornell will introduce "My Sun-Burnt Lily" in their company, now playing in Pennsylvania.

Helene Hyle is meeting with success singing "Don't Come Back and Hang Around Ma Do'," with the Howard Hall company.

Rita Redmond, with Hurtig and Seamon's Trans-Atlantics, writes that "Karama" is the biggest hit she has had since "Anona."

Billy Inman, who is being starred in A Trip to Chinatown, is making a special feature of two of the song hits from the F. B. Haviland Publishing Company—namely, "Oysters and Clams" and "Isn't it Nice to Have Someone to Love You?"

The biggest sellers on the Harris catalogue at the present time are "Always in the Way," "Come Take a Trip in My Airship," "Good-bye, Ma Lady Love," "Just a Gleam of Heaven in Her Eyes," "For Sale, a Baby," "You Never Spoke to Me Like that Before," "Down in the Vale of Shenandoah," and "My Home Beside the River."

"Always in the Way," Charles K. Harris' famous baby song, appears to be on the way to outsell his famous "After the Ball." At the rate it is keeping up it will surpass the other in sales.

The banner number with Jacobs and Lowry's Merry Maidens company this season is the singing of the instantaneous song success, "Billy," led by the inimitable Patti Carney, supported by the entire company. "She's the Pride and the Pet of the Lane" is another number with the same company and is done in tough style, which would do credit to Chuck Connors and his Bowery pals.

Nina Collins is highly elated over the success she is scoring nightly with Robert A. King's new high class ballad, "My Lady's Eyes" and "Zenobie," the new Hindoo love song. Sh eis scoring this week at Brighton Beach.

Quite a novel event took place on the occasion of the yearly trolley ride of the Bonsall Vaudeville company, on Aug. 16, to Coney Island. The guests paid visits to the different theatres, and at Henderson's the entire party, consisting of 1,500 people, arose and joined in singing the chorus of "Blue Bell" and "Beansy," when one of the performers on the bill rendered these songs.

Arthur Wallis, at the head of the Wallis Stock company, is singing with success the Peerless Publishing Company's song, "Ma Mornin' Glory Babe."

Hazel Burt continues to report success with "A Little Boy Called Taps" and "Forget-Me-Not." Joe McNath, Henry and Hoon, May Curtis, Brooke Eltrym, and Ruth Nelta are scoring with new songs from the F. B. Haviland Publishing Company.

Gertrude Nevatt, of the Wallis Stock company, always responds to encores when she renders "Festal Praise," a sacred song by George Wetzel.

The Acme Quartette, who are now playing the leading vaudeville houses, are using a medley of Leo Feist songs, including "Dixie," "I Ain't Got No Time," "My Black-Eyed Sue," "Strolling 'Long the Pike," and "My Little Zu-oo-oo-lu." A recent letter from them states that they are meeting with unusual success upon every rendition of the medley.

J. Royer West and Ida Van Sicien have added Edwin and Brill's latest songs to their act, "When the Snowflakes Fall" and "The More I See of Other Girls the Better I Like You." They pronounce the songs the biggest hits that they ever had in their act.

Beardsley Sisters are using to repeated encores Feist and Barron's dainty serenade, "My Little Zu-oo-oo-lu." They have recently added to their repertoire the new song, "My Lady's Eyes," by Robert A. King, and the phenomenal success, "Billy," by Ted S. Barron. They are so much in demand that they are already booked up for the entire season.

The nautical song, "The Song Our Boys Sang," published by the Peerless Publishing Company, will be used as a special number in many road companies this season.

"The Heroes that Wear the Blue" is the hit of Finnegan's Ball. It is being praised as the best march song in a long time. It is also being used by the most prominent vocalists in vaudeville. Published by Edwin S. Brill.

McDonald and Huntington, at Keith's last week, received four and five encores each time they sang the coon song craze, "I've Got a Feeling for You."

Joe Flynn, the well-known song writer, has placed with his publisher, Edwin S. Brill, a novelty song that will no doubt create a sensation. It is a new idea in song, and will be sung and whistled from coast to coast before the season is over. It is called "When the Snowflakes Fall," a swinging melody set to one of Mr. Flynn's most happy thoughts in lyrics. Many comedy extra choruses for comedians have been written. This song can be used in any act or by any singer.

F. B. Remington, of the Silver City Four, writes that his quartette will feature Al. Trahern's story ballad, "Lights of Home."

"Ma Lady Moon" is being produced in a novel manner by the Blue Ribbon Burlesquers with light effects. Sung by Ira Kessner and a chorus of fifty people, it is the hit of the burlesque. It is also being featured by the Novelty Four, Cetti, Thomsen, Bennett and Argyle, who are engaged as a special feature with Billy Van's production, The Errand Boy.

ENGAGEMENTS.

Gene R. Milton has signed to go with Garland Gaden again next season.

Robert M. Edwards, by F. Lawrence Walker, for Charles B. Hanford's company.

THE FOREIGN STAGE

LONDON.

A Playless Week—Promising Plans for the Season—Regarding Mr. Stead.

(Special Correspondence of The Mirror.)

MIRROR BUREAU,
TRAFALGAR HOUSE, GREEN STREET, LEICESTER SQUARE, W. C.,
LONDON, Aug. 20.

Although since I last had the honor of addressing you there has not been a single new play (not even in the suburban theatres) yet signs are not wanting that the hum of preparation for new plays of all sorts and sizes is making itself heard in our histrionic midst. It may therefore be fitting that I give you some details of these impending novelties.

You are to know, then, as the old dramatists used to say, that the West End season will begin next Saturday, with Arthur Bourchier's production of Henry Arthur Jones' new comedy, at the Garrick. This play has, this very moment, been named The Chevalier, and Bourchier will enact the title part—whose other name is Mounteagle. He will be supported by Violet Vanbrugh (Mrs. A. B.), as an aristocratic lady; Nye Chart, Walter Pearce and O. B. Clarence as three very swagger society folk; Nancy Price, as a dashing widow; Webb-Darleigh, as a professor of magic, and Sydney Valentine, as a waxwork showman, whose models, like those of dear old Artemus Ward, are "highly moral."

Three nights later, on Aug. 30, in fact, Managers Harrison and Maude—who have shifted to Sir Charles Wyndham's new theatre while the Haymarket is being reconstructed—will submit The Beauty and the Bargee, adapted by W. W. Jacobs and Louis Napoleon Parker from a story by the former. In this the handsome Ellis Jeffreys, who recently married Herbert Sleath, will play the Beauty, and Cyril Maude (whose wife, Winifred Emery, is now much better) will impersonate the Bargee. A big barge 34 feet long is being built for much of the action to take place upon. The Beauty and the Bargee is to be preceded by a new one-act drama, adapted from one of Arthur Morrison's strong but necessarily squalid "Tales of Mean Streets." The little play is to be called: That Brute, Simmons.

The next two events will occur on Sept. 1, unless some precautions are taken to prevent clashings. These events are Ada Reeve's first London production of Winnie Brooke, Widow, by Malcolm Watson, of the Daily Telegraph, at the Criterion, and Lewis Waller's reopening of the Imperial with Miss Elizabeth's Prisoner, which has been rewritten so as to include a new prologue. A week or two later Waller will produce the new play which was to be called The Master of the King's Company, but which, I am officially informed, will be renamed His Majesty's Servant, a title which has not yet been made public. Ada Reeve's cast includes Dolores Drummond, Dora Barton, Mrs. Charles Maltby, Henry Vibart, Walter Rignold, Robb Harwood, and Eric Lewis. In Waller's new production the beautiful Evelyn Millard will make her first appearance on the stage for the past two years. As Evelyn is ever charming we shall, of course, be glad to see her again on the boards.

On Sept. 3 George Alexander will reopen the St. James' with Sydney Grundy's adaptation of Justus Miles Forman's The Garden of Lies. This is not, as many have surmised, a romantic costume drama, but quite an up-to-date play of a somewhat satirical kind. The fascinating Lillian Braithwaite, wife of the handsome Gerald Lawrence, who was recently on your side with Sir Henry Irving, will again be the leading lady. Alexander has up his managerial sleeve a new King Arthur play by Poet J. Davidson, wherein he will play Sir Launcelot of the Lake.

Two days later Lena Ashwell, who acted so powerfully in Resurrection at His Majesty's, and who was the heroine in The Darling of the Gods there, will produce Citizen Michael Morton's adaptation of the Rejane play, La Montansier. This is to be called Marguerite, and it will be produced at the Coronet before proceeding on tour. Lena has surrounded herself with a strong company, including Charles Groves, who made such a hit with John Hare in A Pair of Spectacles, and Sydney Fairbrother, a wonderfully clever little woman, who so long scored as the more woeful of the waifs in The Two Little Vagabonds.

We shall then, apparently, have a few days' rest—namely, until the 8th, when Merely Mary Ann, by my gifted young Hebrew friend, Israel Zangwill, will be presented at the Duke of York's. Your Eleanor Robson, whom we are all anxious to see, will return from the Continent on Monday in order to start rehearsals at the D. of Y.'s.

Somewhere between these fixtures and those which are enumerated below we may expect to find Arthur Wing Pinero's new comedy at Wyndham's. Weedon Grossmith was engaged for this, and I had looked for "Pinny" to give him another fine part, such as he gave him in The Cabinet Minister. At the moment of mailing, however, W. G. writes me that he has resigned the part, as he doesn't think it suits him.

On or about Sept. 24 Beerbohm Tree will give a grand and gorgeous revival of The Tempest. In this Tree will enact Caliban, his daughter Viola will be the Ariel, Basil Gill, Ferdinand, and Lionel Brough, Trinculo. Even now Tree does not seem quite sure as to his Prospero. He wanted Forbes-Robertson, but he couldn't get him. In this revival of the Tempest there will be a wondrous ship scene, apparently the best ever known.

When The Tempest has subsided the blithe and bland Beerbohm will produce a new poetical play which the young bard Stephen Phillips has written around the naughty, nasty-minded and nefarious Nero.

The only other definitely fixed new production is that of an adaptation of the French piece, Le Prince Consort, which was recently secured for England and America by Composer Ivan Caryll, who just after I mailed you last week wired me that he was at that moment embarking for your hospitable shores. This adaptation, at present called His Highness My Husband is to be produced by Manager George Edwardes at the Prince of Wales' on or about Sept. 26.

A large number of theatrical and variety managers and artists came along for many weary leagues last Monday to congratulate Manager Charles Morton, of the Palace Theatre, on attaining the eighty-fifth anniversary of his birth. Letters came in the hundred and telegrams by the gross, and all sorts of presents were forthcoming, especially of lovely flowers and luscious fruit, two things which the veteran dearly loves. Among the congratulators present were E. W. Mackney, an octogenarian, who was the leading negro comedian and dancer in the music halls of the forties and fifties of the last century, which halls of the period were the invention of the said Morton. A Morton biography (with a mass of illustrations) has just been written by Charles' brother William and his old friend, H. Chance Newton, who grew up in C. M.'s many theatres and halls. The book is to be published by Gale and Polden in about a month's time.

Manager Frank McKee (whom I found looking well and strong when I popped in a few nights ago to see how The Prince of Pilsen was going at the Shaftesbury) yesterday resailed for your city. During his short stay this time he has been arranging with H. E. Moss (who with Oswald Stoll directs that mighty music hall enterprise, the Moss' Empires, Limited) to run a score or so of big music halls in your states.

We have had some matter for conversation, nay, even for volcanic argument, in theatrical and variety circles. First and foremost, there has been the doubtless well meaning but certainly often wild idea'd Stead's second installment regarding the drama and its professors in the latest number of his Review of Reviews. W. T. S. has not yet carried out his threat as to criticising new plays from the viewpoint of one who has never yet seen a play in all the fifty-five years during which he has been good enough to dwell upon this terrestrial ball, as one of his (and my) favorite hymns calls it. The reason why Stead has not yet carried this threat into execution is, of course, akin to that why the gentleman in Sheridan's play, The Critic, could not see the Spanish fleet—namely, because it was not yet in sight. For, as I have indicated above, no new plays to criticise, Stead-ily or otherwise.

The Seraphic Stead has, however, contrived to lead off his second dramatic installment with a statement which has naturally caused quite a little flutter. It is that he was actually instigated to try his playgoing—and play-noticing—experiments by no less a histrionic personage than Sir Henry Irving. And this is how William T. S. states the matter:

When I was editing the "Pall Mall Gazette," nearly twenty years ago, Mr. Bram Stoker, who was then secretary to Sir Henry Irving, came to me with a message from his chief, who was then at the zenith of his glory at the Lyceum. He urged me then to undertake a visitation of the theatres. I need hardly say this suggestion was not made from any desire that I should act as Inquisitor-General into the morals of the Green-room. That subject was never mentioned. Sir Henry's point of view was that of an actor passionately devoted to the Stage. He thought it was in my power to render a greater service to the British Theatre than any living journalist.

When I expressed my amazement at so incredible a statement, and pleaded my utter ignorance of the subject, Mr. Stoker said it was precisely because I was a tyro—grown-up tyro—innocent of all the tricks of the stage and the conventionalities of the profession—that he wanted so much to have my impressions. All dramatic critics who are experts in the craft see the play through the atmosphere of convention. They are accustomed, from long familiarity with the tradition and practice of the stage, to see certain emotions expressed in certain ways. There are mannerisms which grow up in the representation of the drama which escape their practiced eye—precisely because it is practised and inured to what it has been from childhood. What Sir Henry wanted was a full-grown man, with the pen of a ready writer, and access to the public press, who had never been to the theatre. The impressions of such an adult who brought the fresh eye of a child to look for the first time upon the mimic life of the stage, Sir Henry said, could hardly fail to give actors hints which might be of great value to them in the practice of their profession. Hitherto, he had failed to find any journalist of standing who had not been spoiled for his purpose by the habits of playgoing. When he heard that I had not seen a stage play he sent, in the interest of his own profession, to beg me to allow the public to learn what were the impressions of an untrained eye and unsophisticated judgment when first confronted with the efforts made by players to hold the mirror up to nature.

After this our William prints several expressions of opinion regarding his artless play-viewing experiment, and of his recently expressed opinions—or, rather, surmises, as to the habits and customs of player folk; surmises upon which I have duly pronounced in THE MIRROR. Among the opinion-expressors now quoted by Mr. Stead are Mr. and Mrs. F. R. Benson, who have for so many years gone a-touring with the works of the Bard, whom some of your (and our) cryptogrammatic cranks describe as Francis Bacon; also Sydney Grundy, the dramatist; Charles Manners, who runs the Moody Manners Opera company, lately at Drury Lane; George Bernard Shaw, H. B. Irving, and several Church of England and Nonconformist divines, including the Dean of Durham, Canon Barker, the Rev. Scott Lidgett, a Wesleyan leading light; Rev. J. Page Hopps, a Unitarian ditto, and the Rev. R. J. Campbell, of the City Temple.

Benson gave off a sort of apology, pointing out (evidently for Stead's benefit) that his gardener wisely remarked the other day that no man can learn to grow flowers. "He must live among them, and love them, and then perhaps it may come to him; this seems to me equally true in questions of art, both for critics and artists. I am lost in wonder that a clever man like yourself should have the temerity to write on a difficult subject of which he admits he knows nothing and cares less."

Mrs. Benson gently admonished Stead in this vein: "How is it possible to judge of any life by a hurried glance at merely the exterior? And at the age of fifty-five a man must naturally be biassed in his views. Would you send a man to write a criticism on cricket if he had never held a bat or witnessed a match? How can you judge of the theatre by witnessing one play, and without intimately knowing the players how has any one the right to stamp them as 'immoral?' I have never before heard that a 'church choir' were more moral than other folk."

Grundy wrote at great length, but not with his accustomed epigrammatic lucidity. H. B. Irving calmly admonished Stead thus: "Since you have seen fit to draw attention to some words spoken by the late Clement Scott on the subject of the morality of actresses, you should, in common fairness, and in justice to the memory of Clement Scott, draw attention also to his retraction of those words, 'spoken by him at a moment of great personal strain,' which appeared in the Daily Telegraph of April 7, 1898. In it Mr. Scott desired 'to express my regret to the ladies of the theatrical profession, and to the theatrical profession at large, for having given utterance to words which I now realize must have inflicted pain upon many good women, whom I not only respect, but whose claims to the good opinion of all I freely and frankly avow. I desire to withdraw such statements as I then made.'"

Bernard Shaw (whom Stead slyly describes as "the most serious of all our humorists") babbles Bernardly, and of course scoffs in Shaw-like fashion. As is his wont, G. B. S., while professing to talk about the drama, lugs in most of his fads, especially what I may call his Scripturephobia. For example, he airily tells Stead that the Bible is "a grossly overrated bundle of Hebrew literature."

Canon Barker thought that the stage might subserve very useful purposes if it could be purged of what everybody admits is objectionable now, and, secondly, if the class of plays were of a higher moral order than some that are presented; but the difficulties are immense, for plays must be made to pay, and therefore for this purpose must be highly spiced. "If every municipality had a playhouse of its own, subsidized out of the rates, we might get admirable results. The people want amusement and recreation as much almost as food."

The Rev. Lidgett adopted a rather lukewarm attitude (for a Wesleyan). Indeed, to my thinking, his Epistle to Stead savored of a facing-both-ways attitude. Congregationalist Campbell, however, was more decided and what he said he said over a luncheon with Stead. Here are a few of the white-haired and widely popular young minister's remarks:

"My theory," said he, "which accords with my practice, has been to discriminate between the various forms of theatrical entertainment provided for the public, and sparingly to attend such performances as seem to me good. I go, for instance, to see every new piece my friend Beerbohm Tree puts on the stage. I have done so for a year or two, and I have never seen in his theatre anything on the stage or off it that was out of harmony with the atmosphere of the Christian home. The dramatic instinct is innate in man. It is an integral part of human nature. Hence I cannot think it right to deprive it of any mode of expression. That it can be abused is no reason why it should not be used. The Puritan boycott of the stage was a natural reaction against the license of the theatre. The exaltation of celibacy over marriage by the early Church was the product of a similar reaction against the evils of their day. But these reactions are apt to carry men too far; and human nature will always assert itself in the end. Hence I say, give the theatre a discriminating support, and be moderate in all things."

Now with these words of wisdom (as I take Campbell's to be) I finish this theme, for the nonce, anyway.

AUSTRALIA.

Excellent Business Everywhere—Maori Opera Produced—Numerous News Notes.

(Special Correspondence of The Mirror.)

SYDNEY, July 18.

Theatrical business is exceptionally brisk in the Australian mother city, and the various managers, despite the keen competition, are, on the whole, doing well. Whether it will last over the Winter months remains to be seen. Mr. Williamson, as usual, leads the way at Her Majesty's, where A Country Girl, which was attracting crowded audiences, has been succeeded by the long-promised Maori comic opera, or, rather, extravaganza, Ta-Pu, the music of which is bright and sparkling, the scenery extremely beautiful, but the book somewhat patchy. The introduction of G. H. Reid, the leader of the Federal Opposition, as a labor delegate, although extremely amusing, has generally been considered injudicious, politics being regarded as out of place, save in pantomime, on the Australian stage. The great feature of the piece is, however, the native war dance performed by real Maoris. Ta-Pu will probably find its way to America, where it may start the fashion for Maori plays.

If a crowded audience and any amount of enthusiastic applause on the opening night signify success, Harry James' son of Weber and Fields' burlesque at the Palace should prove a theatrical bonanza. Fiddle De Dee is just the kind of production to please Australians, and with plenty of pretty and clever girls, as well as capable performers of the opposite sex, and brilliant stage mounting, it is more than possible that the company will have a rosy time of it while in Sydney.

Walter Sandford has made an encouraging start with his play, The Power of Gold, at the Lyceum, which is to be followed by The Struggle for Life, but it is uphill work competing with Bland Holt at the Sydney Royal, Mr. Holt, like Alfred Dampier, enjoying an immense amount of personal popularity with Australian playgoers. Mr. Sanford is, however, successfully preparing the way for regular seasons of American plays, and bids fair, should he remain in the Commonwealth, to become a great favorite with lovers of the romantic drama.

At the Royal, The Great Millionaire has been followed by The Union Jack, and Walter Raleigh's Flood Tide is underlined. As usual, Mr. Holt is doing excellent business. He refuses to arrange for matinees, being unwilling to overwork his company. At the close of his season next Easter he will return to the Melbourne Royal, where he will stay until Easter, 1906, subsequently revisiting Sydney, neither city ever becoming wearied of his productions.

Mr. Williamson's comedy company is concluding its season at the Criterion, and will be followed by Ernest Knight, an English actor, and a new company, in His Majesty the King, but he will find it difficult to make much headway against the rivalry of Bland Holt and Walter Sanford in what is practically the same line of business.

MELBOURNE, July 18.

At Her Majesty's Cuyler Hastings has increased his popularity by his powerful renderings of John Storm, in The Christian, and Dick Heldar, in Kipling's Light That Failed. Mr. Hastings has now secured a reputation which will always insure him a cordial reception in any part of the Commonwealth.

The attraction at the Royal is The Mariners of England, which is following up the success achieved by A Woman of Pleasure, the leading actress in each being Eugenie Duggan (Mrs. William Anderson), who emotional powers are considerable. Mr. Anderson's plays are run on much the same lines as those of Bland Holt, and are equally successful, the company being an excellent working one and the staging of each piece being exceptional.

Tom Perman has relinquished the management of the Gaiety, held by him for about two years, and will take his company, including the Gotham Quartette, on tour.

ADELAIDE, July 18.

At the Royal the Charles Holloway company has been succeeded by George Edwardes' Gaiety company with Kitty Grey, to be followed by The Girl from Kay's and The Three Little Maids. Mr. Huntley, the strongest male member of the combination, is credited with a taste for the turf, and is said to have purchased a horse which ran second in the Victorian Grand National Steeplechase, with the intention of sending it, accompanied by the jockey, to England. It may be mentioned also that George Edwardes is one of the magnates of the English turf.

Gaston Mervale has joined the Cuyler Hastings company, in which he will succeed Hamilton Stewart, who is returning to England. May Chevalier (Mrs. Hamilton Stewart) will be succeeded by Mrs. Brune, who will make her first appearance in Sunday.

Among the new pieces secured by Williamson are The Cingalese and The Duchess of Dantzic.

Edwin Geach has assumed the management of Charles Holloway's dramatic company, which will open at Perth, Western Australia, on Aug. 6, with Two Little Vagabonds.

In the new theatrical partnership between Messrs. J. C. Williamson, Ramaciotti (proprietor of the Sydney Royal), and G. Tallis, to be conducted under the title "J. C. Williamson," Mr. Williamson holds one-half, and each of his partners a quarter share.

George Willoughby has gone to England, as has also Roxy Bartin.

The Hawtrey company is doing well in Perth, Western Australia.

Henry Hallam and Josephine Stanton (Mrs. Hallam) have sailed for London via South Africa.

The Knight-Jeffries company, having closed its Brisbane season, is now at Newcastle, N. S. W., with Ballarat, Victoria and Adelaide to follow, opening at the latter place on July 30 with Monsieur Beaucaire.

Alfred Dampier is touring Queensland with much success.

The non-success of Nawn and Rial during the latter portion of the Sydney Palace season was due principally to the keen competition in the city and the absence of frequent changes in the company. In this latter respect Harry Rickards had the pull by a long way.

JOHN PLUMMER.

NOTES OF OPENINGS.

Asa Lee Willard, having secured the rights to Jim Bludso for all territory west of the Ohio River, will begin a tour in that play on Sept. 1.

Herbert Kelcey and Effie Shannon will begin their season in Taps at Trenton, N. J., on Sept. 5.

The Fenberg Stock company opened at Bath, Me., Aug. 8. The company is one of the best Manager Fenberg has ever carried. The company has twenty-four people, six feature specialties, and uses the following plays: Beware of Men, Not Guilty, The Young Heiress, On the Stroke of Twelve, The Queen of White Slaves, A Debt of Honor, Rip Van Winkle, Fallen by the Wayside, and Dealers in White Women.

Nance O'Neil will open her season at the Tremont Theatre, Boston, late in September, and on Oct. 10 she will present for the first time a play by Thomas Bailey Aldrich entitled The Tents of Assur. Miss O'Neil will begin her engagement at the Herald Square Theatre on Nov. 28.

Madame Schumann-Heink will begin her tour in Love's Lottery in Detroit on Sept. 12. On Oct. 30 the company will open at the Broadway Theatre in this city for a seven weeks' engagement.

Jefferson De Angelis will open his tour in Fantana at the Garrick Theatre, Chicago, on Sept. 19.

The Dolly Varden company, under the direction of F. C. Whitney, will open at Trenton, N. J., on Oct. 6.

Florence Gale's transcontinental tour in As You Like It will begin at Troy on Sept. 12.

The second season at popular prices of The Fortune Teller will open in Baltimore the last week of September, under the direction of Milton and Sargent Aborn, who bought the production last season. Grace Hazzard will be seen in the title-role, while a special feature of the attraction will be the appearance of Elsie Janis in the part of Mlle. Pom Pom. Miss Janis, who is more widely known as "Little Elsie," under which title she has been a big favorite in vaudeville several years, has signed a contract to run for several years with the Messrs. Aborn, and it is not unlikely that they will put her forth as a star next season. The opening of the season in Baltimore will be preceded by three weeks of stock at the Academy, where the Aborn productions were given for two months last Spring. Beginning Sept. 5, they will present The Serenade, Erminie, and The Belle of New York, then playing The Fortune Teller for the fourth week with the same cast that will go on tour in this opera.

Robert B. Mantell, assisted by Marie Booth Russell, will begin his tour Sept. 5 in Waltham, Mass. His early season will be devoted to performances of The Light of Other Days. Late in November Mr. Mantell is to make elaborate revivals of Hamlet, Othello, Richelieu, Romeo and Juliet, and Richard III, in which he has not appeared in several years. During the season he will present these plays in New York.

Henrietta Crosman, in Sweet Kitty Bellairs will resume her run at the Belasco on Saturday night, Sept. 3. Miss Crosman will remain for only three weeks at the Belasco, as David Warfield is announced to appear in the new Charles Klein play, The Music Master, on Sept. 26.

Rehearsals of Little Johnny Jones, in which George M. Cohan will star this season, will begin Sept. 1. The season will open Oct. 10 at Worcester, Mass., and the New York engagement will commence Oct. 31 at the New York Theatre.

IN BROOKLYN THEATRES.

The chief event of theatrical interest in Brooklyn this week is the opening of the handsome new Majestic Theatre, at Fulton street and Ashland place. The playhouse will be found to be one of Brooklyn's most capacious and beautiful theatres. The opening attraction is the original New York co. and production of The Wizard of Oz, including Montgomery and Stone.

The opening attraction at the Montauk Theatre is George Ade's musical comedy, Peggy from Paris. Mr. Savage has retained many of the players who scored pronounced hits in the four months' run at Wallack's Theatre.

The Sultan of Sulu is the attraction beginning the second season at the Broadway Theatre this week.

The new stock company at the Columbia Theatre offers an unusually strong drawing card this week in the stirring Soldiers of Fortune, the play in which Robert Edeson formerly appeared. Richard Buhler, the leading man, will be seen to advantage as the star. Jessaline Rodgers, late of the American Theatre, Manhattan, is a notable addition to the company. A concert will be rendered every afternoon and evening in the lobby.

The Spooner attraction at the Bijou this week is Little Miss Fortune, by J. Searle Dawley. This is the fourth play written by Mr. Dawley and produced by Mrs. Spooner. In the title role Cecil Spooner has an exceptional chance to show her first rate ability in handling a comedy part. A Western mining town is the scene of the many stirring episodes, which deal with a mining claim. All the old favorites appear in the cast, including Augustus Philips and Harold Kennedy. Claude Thardo is heard in the latest song, and Cecil Spooner gives a dancing specialty.

Louise Beaton, in Rachel Goldstein, is the opening attraction at the Folly Theatre this week.

The attraction at the Grand Opera House this week is Under Southern Skies.

The Corse Payton Stock co. has been working hard for months to make the initial play of this season, The Henrietta, as great a success as carpenters, painters and carpetmen have made of the Lee Avenue Theatre. Patrons of the theatre will be delighted when they see the improvements—for Mr. Payton has spared no expense in making his house one of the most comfortable in Brooklyn, and his attractions exceptionally good this season. Stewart Robson's old part of Bertie the Lamb is played by Corse Payton, and Ella Reed Payton plays Mrs. Rose Van Alstyne, wife of the scoundrel. Grace Fox is seen in one of her great character parts, and Louis Leon Hall, the new leading man, plays Dr. Wainwright. The rest of the company are required in this production.

Percy G. Williams' production, Deserted at the Altar, has been secured for the opening attraction at the Gotham Theatre, which will begin its season on Saturday, Sept. 3.

At the Star Theatre this week Weber's Parisian Widows will supply amusement to the patrons of this popular playhouse. The Widows offer a strictly up to date style of entertainment, and have added some new songs to the burlesque A Day at the Barracks. Elmer Tenley, a Brooklyn favorite, who has been at Watson's, is featured in the skit, Down the Pike.

VINCENT R. KIRK.

CUES.

Peter Sells, the noted circus proprietor and manager, was stricken with paralysis last Friday at his home at Columbus, O. He is fifty-seven years old, and his physicians consider his condition very serious.

Leslie Leigh, of The Isle of Spice company, who was summoned to Denver because of the serious illness of her father, resumed her role of Trinket last Friday evening.

R. Lawrence Giffen has been engaged as business manager with Cecelia Loftus in The Serio-Comic Governess.

A son was born to Mr. and Mrs. Owen Davis (Elizabeth Breyer) in New York on Aug. 14.

Violette Craig, recently a member of Harry Corson Clarke's company, was married in Chicago last week to Will L. McAllister, of Salt Lake City.

MATTERS OF FACT.

Paul L. Brandt, formerly associated in the management of The Odeon Theatre, Baltimore, Md., and Hugo Goldsmith, formerly with Ethel Barrymore co., have leased the Grand Opera House, New Albany, Ind., from Matt Kusell. All bookings previously made will be assumed by them. The house has been thoroughly renovated and redecorated, and will be run as a first class combination house as heretofore. They are also booking Wood's Opera House, Forest City, Ark.

Robert B. Mantell's season will open on Sept. 5. He will be supported this year by Marie Booth-Russell and a carefully selected company, producing The Light of Others Days and Shakespearean repertoire. Max Zoellner is Mr. Mantell's manager and will look after his tour this season as heretofore. Each production will be made complete in every detail.

The Silk-e Manufacturing Company announce in this issue special line of hose, furnished in all styles, and extensively used by the profession.

The Lyric Theatre, St. Joseph, Mo., centrally located, modern in every equipment, is for rent.

Theatrical stationery of all kinds is printed by Cunningham and Company, Williamsport, Pa.

John T. Craven, whose portrait is published on another page, is about to close his long connection with the Castle Square Stock company, Boston, and for a while will remain at his Boston residence, 658 Massachusetts Avenue.

The Kilties' Band, of Belleville, Canada, are now in the thirteenth week of their ninth tour, and are meeting with unusual success. Their two weeks at the World's Fair is worthy of special mention, owing to the fact that "the Kilties" were the only band to enjoy the distinction of playing its entire engagement in Festival Hall, where extra admission is charged. The band will return to Canada on Sept. 8, and will have a reception and farewell in their home city, Belleville, on Sept. 9, when the City Council and Board of Trade will give them a banquet and decorate them with medals before their sailing for London for their tour of Great Britain. The Kilties are the first Canadian band to cross the water, and all Canadian cities will join in the celebration on that day. They will sail from Montreal on Sept. 10, and open their first concert in Queen's Hall, London, on Sept. 24.

Catherine Proctor, who succeeded Sandol Millikin last season with Maude Adams as Sarita in The Pretty Sister of Jose, has been making rapid progress in vocal studies this Summer. Miss Proctor has developed a mezzo-contralto voice of considerable range and power.

The Speck Brothers (the original "Yellow Kids") will again be seen as Alex and George in this season's production of McFadden's Flats. Rehearsals are now in progress and the season will open eerly in September. In the cast will be Lizzie Conway, Gussie Nelson, Otto Brothers, William Barry, Joe Willard, Harry Fentelle, Speck Brothers, together with a large chorus and a concert band of sixteen pieces. Clifford Meech will be musical director, George Chenet in advance, and Charles Barto, manager.

A LIVE LOCAL MANAGER WITH $5000 WANTED FOR HENDERSON, KY.

We will have our beautiful new $40,000 Theatre "THE ENGLISH," completed at Henderson, Ky., in the next three weeks, and being built along the lines of "THE KENTUCKY" at Paducah, will be the prettiest theatre in the State of Kentucky, and the line of bookings, through both Mess. Klaw & Erlanger and Mess. Stair & Havlin, who are the New York Booking Agents, would surprise the old timers for a town of 20,000. Being only 15 miles from Evansville, Henderson will prove a blessing to road attractions, thus breaking the jump between Evansville and Paducah, and will be a gold mine for both attractions and house.

I have bought the entire stock of The J. E. English Theatre Co., who built and own the house, and owing to my decision to give my entire time to THE KENTUCKY at Paducah, and to theatre construction, I will have to have a good live manager for Henderson, although I expect to and will continue to book The English in connection with The Kentucky, and I invite correspondence with the view of selling an interest in The English to a good, live, wide-awake manager who can reside in Henderson and I will allow him a liberal salary for his work, in addition to his dividends on his interest. AN IMPERTINENT EGOTIST.

ONE of the most remarkable of the sinister reflections on the stage by one who knows nothing about the stage is embodied in the recent journalistic eccentricity of W. T. STEAD, who, at the age of fifty-five years, after the confession that throughout his life he had held aloof from the theatre, has approached that institution with an intention to "investigate" its moral influence, though in effect condemning it in advance.

Through the London correspondence of THE MIRROR everything of interest in this peculiar display of an impertinent egotism on the part of STEAD has been and is being ventilated. The character and value of his analyses of and deductions from his subject may be gathered in suggestion from a personal statement or confession that STEAD has made. He declared that he had all through his life avoided the theatre, because "when he was twenty he was for days worn out after merely hearing a stout woman in evening dress read from Antony and Cleopatra;" and "at the age of sixteen, too, he had conceived a romantic devotion for an actress he had never seen." The temptation to go demented over actresses is, he believes, one "from which few enthusiastic young men are immune."

To seriously consider such flapdoodle as this, advanced seriously by a person who assumes to instruct the public on various subjects, is a waste of time, although it affords ample opportunity for pertinent derision. Another of his amazing ideas is embodied in a statement that "Until the standard of morality on the stage"—of which he really knows absolutely nothing—"is as high as it is among members of a church choir" he does not see "how it will be possible to overcome the reluctance of a very great number of very good people to recognize the theatre as an indispensable agency for the moral and intellectual elevation of the community." The putting forth of the church choir as a model of propriety to be followed by the people of the theatre is original, if not exactly pertinent or effective. And perhaps Mr. STEAD knows more about church choirs than he does about the theatre. But who assumes that the theatre's sole aim is to be an agency for "the moral and intellectual elevation of the community?" Mr. STEAD seems to have mixed things in his intellectuals—if he has intellectuals. It is true that the theatre in its better manifestations incidentally uplifts morally and inspires intellectually; but its chief function is healthful recreation and rational amusement.

Mr. STEAD had better begin to go to the theatre with his virgin impressionability—and without his prejudice.

THE THEATRICAL ROSTER.

THE MIRROR this week publishes the first installment of its annual roster of theatrical companies, and from this list it will be seen that a formidable number of organizations is already testing a season as to which a variety of opinions—all, of course, more or less in the nature of guesswork—have been expressed. The belief of many managers that the season of 1904-5 will be a prosperous one is evident from the number of companies already in the field, and from the announcements of early beginning that have been made. Of course there are other managers who are apprehensive of a bad season, and still others who usually wait to put out large ventures until a period of cool weather is assured.

From the number of companies now started in theatrical centres, or on tour, however, it may be said that the feeling of confidence in the outcome of the new season is quite general. As THE MIRROR has pointed out, there seems to be less political excitement pending than during a Presidential campaign in many years, and this may be taken as a token that no great change in business affairs may be expected, no matter which of the great political parties succeeds. If this be so, no matter how the campaign itself may excite the public and distract attention from amusements, it is but natural to expect that when the battle of the ballots is over general business—and particularly the business of the theatre—will be stimulated to an unusual degree.

The first installment of the roster in THE MIRROR this week is no doubt the largest ever published by this journal. It will be followed in due time by other installments, until the published record shall practically include all the theatrical organizations of consequence bidding for public favor for the dramatic year.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR.

Mr. McCloskey's Reminiscences.

NEW YORK, Aug. 25, 1904.

To the Editor of The Dramatic Mirror:

SIR: I thank THE MIRROR for its kind notice of me. I hope it did not overestimate the value of my forthcoming book of Recollections. It is a longer task than I anticipated. I have written some 500 pages and am still in California. There is yet to be traveled Honolulu, Samoa and Australia. As I write the events of more than fifty years surge upon me, and the task seems endless. Many whom I have met as young men have become well-known historical characters—one President of our country, some soldiers, others admirals, others still high in the councils of the nation. Fremont, Walker, the filibuster; Broderick, Stephen J. Fields, of the United States Supreme Court; George C. Gorham, secretary of the United States Senate, the Booth family, Frank Mayo, Matilda Heron, Mrs. Yeamans as a girl, Lola Montez, and many others it has been my good fortune to have met and passed pleasant hours with.

My tour through Australia with the first American company under Charles R. Thorne, Sr., is full of reminiscence. The story of Lizzie Bingham, the first woman to play in the English language in California, two years before the discovery of gold; her eventful life and her heroic death at the siege of Grenada, entitle her to be known as the Mollie Pitcher of Walker's ill-fated expedition, and may prove of interest to the profession of to-day.

THE MIRROR'S reference to my play, Across the Continent, which enabled one man to live on Easy street the balance of his days, will be duplicated by another person, who will enjoy his many thousands from the earnings of my latest success, Across the Pacific. You must not, therefore, place me in the category of a has-been.

Yours respectfully, J. J. MCCLOSKEY.

About the Late Dan Emmett.

WOODLAWN MANSION, ACCOTINK,
FAIRFAX COUNTY, VIRGINIA, Aug. 25, 1904.

To the Editor of The Dramatic Mirror:

SIR.—There are several points which seem to be in dispute concerning the late Daniel Decatur Emmett which I should like to make clear. I can speak with authority, for at the time he was widely brought before the public by the action of the Actors' Fund in granting him what virtually amounted to a pension during the last ten years of his life, I was living in Mt. Vernon and was instrumental in bringing him to the notice of the Fund.

When I made Mr. Emmett's acquaintance I think few of his townspeople understood who he was or the nature of his claim to fame. He had returned there after an absence of almost fifty years, and, naturally enough, only a few of the older residents of the place knew anything concerning him.

He appeared there in 1888 and, purchasing an acre or two of ground on the outskirts of the town, proceeded to erect the small cottage which he occupied up to the time of his death.

I had been told that he was the author of "Dixie," "Old Dan Tucker," "Boatman's Dance," "The Road to Richmond," &c., and one Sunday afternoon I walked out to his cottage. One of the first things I asked him was if he was the Dan Emmett who wrote "Dixie." He laughed and said, "Well, I've heard of the fellow."

At this time he was living entirely alone, and had been for several years.

On the occasion of my second call on Emmett the door of his cottage was locked and the old composer nowhere in sight, but a neighbor who seemed deeply interested in the unusual fact that Mr. Emmett had a caller told me that I would find him in the woods, perhaps a mile distant; and there I found him, and at work with his axe.

He told me quite frankly that he was chopping wood not exactly for the pleasure of it, but because the farmer who owned the timber paid him for the work and allowed him to bring off all the chips and unsalable wood for his own use—an important point during the Winter months, as his cottage was not "piped for gas," and until the Actors' Fund began the payment of the weekly stipend that made the latter years of his life comfortable and free from care I do not think his dealings with the coal yards were extensive.

I am unable to enlighten my friend, Mr. Harper, as to what disposition the farmer made of the wood Emmett cut, but I saw the ranks where he had corded it.

In addition to cutting wood, I am under the impression that he worked for the nearby farmers; but as for tramping the streets hunting odd jobbs, this was something that never happened in the year or more during which I knew him, nor did I ever hear of his having done this. As Mr. Harper says, he was independent and self-respecting, he thrust himself on no man's notice, and I know of several instances where well-meaning people went to him with the idea of proffering help who were handsomely rebuffed for their pains. If Mr. Nobles saw him with axe and buck saw, I am quite sure the old gentleman was merely bringing these tools into town to have them sharpened, and not with any idea of securing work on any one's woodpile.

After this I saw Emmett frequently, and as his mind was alert and vigorous and his reminiscences of the early days of minstrelsy most interesting, I induced him to furnish the facts for several newspaper articles. The publicity thus gained enabled him to dispose of a few autograph copies of "Dixie" at a good price. But these sources of revenue were soon exhausted, and I suggested to him that he make an appeal to the Actors' Fund. He was opposed to this, however, and would take no steps himself to bring his situtions to the Fund's attention. He even made me promise to do nothing in the matter—a promise only partially kept, for some months later, when on the point of leaving Mt. Vernon I asked my brother, Paul Kester, to write to Mr. Palmer.

Results were immediate. The answer was a telegram, the secretary of the Fund, saying that $50 was on the way for Emmett. This was followed by a letter which I quote in full:

NEW YORK CITY, March 3, 1893.

To Paul Kester:

Dear Sir,—Referring to the case of Dan Emmett, I beg leave to state that in addition to the $50 donated him, the Executive Committee have awarded him weekly relief of $5 for a term of ten weeks. At the expiration of this term the relief will be extended should it be needed.

I am also in receipt of a check from John S. James, of No. 18 New Street, this city, for $25, with a request than I send that amount to Mr. Emmett.

This I have done, and you may rest assured that the old gentleman's remaining days will be passed in comfort.

Thanking you for bringing this most worthy case to our notice, I am,

Yours very truly,
LESTER S. GURNEY.

While Emmett was Ohio born, his father was a Virginian and his mother came from Fredrick, Md. Emmett himself was very Southern in sentiment, for much of his life had been spent in the South and Southwest.

As a boy he had learned the printer's trade, but abandoned that in 1835 to join the band of a circus company. He very early began to write his own songs, and these were a feature of his turn in the ring. Among the earliest was "Old Dan Tucker," once almost as famous as "Dixie" has since become.

His connection with the circus continued until 1842, when, in New York City, in connection with Frank Brower, Billy Whitlock and Dick Pelom, he originated a species of entertainment which the Bryants and others developed into negro minstrelsy.

The first regular appearance of the four was at the Chatham Theatre. They styled themselves "The Virginia Minstrels," and from the Chatham Theatre they went to a saloon called the "Cornacopia," near the Park Theatre. As they drew largely on the patrons of the Park, the manager stifled disastrous competition by engaging them for his own house. From the Park they went to Boston, duplicating their New York success. Then, leaving the scene of their triumphs, they sailed for England. After six disastrous weeks at the Adelphi Theatre, London, followed by a short and inglorious season in the provinces, the enterprise came to an abrupt end.

It was not until 1858 that Emmett again ventured upon the stage, when Bryan engaged him for his company at 472 Broadway. It was while he was with Bryant that "Dixie" was written.

Emmett's authorship of the song has been questioned repeatedly, and, I suppose, will continue to be questioned, not because any proof exists that he did not write it, but merely for the same reason that there is a Baconian theory in America and a school of critics in Germany who assert that the "Iliad" was not written by Homer, but by another man of the same name.

As a matter of fact, shortly after the close of the Civil War, Emmett, on behalf of Ferth and Pond, who had purchased the rights to "Dixie" for $500, appeared in the courts of Louisville, Ky., where the song was being pirated, and established his claim to the authorship of the piece. No doubt, the records in the case still exist.

At one time Emmett was fairly successful in a moneyed way, and accumulated considerable property in Chicago, where he had located after leaving Bryant, but the great fire came and wiped out his savings in a night. After this calamity he depended on his violin for support. In the end this failed him, and it remained for the Actors' Fund to make his last years comfortable and self-respecting, and I think its recognition, in a way, was more to him than the money itself, necessary as it was. Very faithfully,

VAUGHAN KESTER.

A Reader's Plea.

NEW YORK, Aug. 25, 1904.

To the Editor of The Dramatic Mirror:

SIR.—In reading the article by your London correspondent in a recent MIRROR, in which he speaks of Stephens' dramatization of Milton's Paradise Lost, I was struck by the remark, "The daring drama was promptly forbidden by our play licenser, whereupon the undaunted Stephens set to making preparations to the production of this Miltonic drama in your States, where I understand you will very soon see it."

This seems like an imposition on the American public, who have no protection whatever. Must they take whatever plays are hoisted upon them? Is our standard so low that we receive with open arms what England suppresses?

No; our public does not want these plays, but we have no licenser, no committee to pass judgment on them, and the people, particularly on one-night stands, suffer in consequence, for they are absolutely in the dark as to the nature of a play before they have seen it. They have lost confidence in their local manager, for he books all kinds. So what are they to do? They cannot stay away from the theatre entirely, knowing that there must be many good plays on the road; so they take their chance, and then how many a young lady finds the blood rushing to her cheeks at some suggestive scene or line? No wonder some churches make no distinction and put their ban upon all, for without some criterion that is the only way of avoiding indecent plays.

When a new play is billed in a town, it may be ever so clean, but the people do not know it, and because some play the reverse preceded it, it plays to a very poor house. If on their bills they could only advertise, "Indorsed by the Actors' Church Alliance," or any other censorship that might be established!

Look how prosperous the Shekespearean productions are becoming on night stands. Is it because the people are so anxious to see Shakespearean plays more than other plays of a high order? I hardly think so. But they know what they are going to see, and it affords such a relief to them from the lower order of farce comedies and lurid melodramas.

Why will dramatists insist on putting in something suggestive, if it is only a line, in some of our best plays? The people do not want that. But the dramatists' excuse is that they must please all classes.

Is there no help for the one-night stand? This is a subject in which I am deeply interested. I speak in behalf of the young women, for they have suffered long. I am one myself, and have lived all my life, previous to my going on the stage, in one of the one-night stands, and have since played them so thoroughly that I feel I understand the condition of affairs in them pretty well. Yours very truly, A. B. M.

L. R. W. ALLISON, Bloomfield, N. J.: 1. The Corsican Brothers was revived by Manager John Stetson at Booth's Theatre, New York City, on Jan. 8, 1883, and not Jan. 3, as appeared in this column, issue of Aug. 20—a typographical error. 2. Charles R. Thorne, Jr., died Feb. 10, 1883. 3. Dion Boucicault was born Dec. 20, 1822, or, according to some authorities, Dec. 26.

H. L. H., Milwaukee: L'Assommoir, the reigning sensation in Paris at the time, was first produced in this country April 28, 1879, at the Olympic Theatre, New York. Augustin Daly's version was used with the original title, L'Assommoir. Harry Meredith played the leading role of Coupeau, and Maude Granger was the heroine, Gervaise. The play ran just three weeks. Charles Reade's adaptation of Zola's novel, "L'Assommoir," called Drink, was produced at the Standard Theatre, New York, Jan. 31, 1881, with Rose Eytinge and Cyril Searle in the leading characters.

R. H. EBERT, Denver, Col.: 1. Too recent a production to publish the cast. 2. Bronson Howard's Aristocracy was first produced at Palmer's Theatre, New York City, Nov. 14, 1892, with the following cast: Jefferson Stockton, Wilton Lackaye; Virginia, Viola Allen; Diana Stockton, Blanche Walsh; Sheridan, Paul Arthur; Mr. Hamilton Stuart Lawrence, W. H. Thompson; Mrs. Lawrence, nee Ten Broeck, Helen Tracy; Katharine Ten Broeck Lawrence, S. Miller Kent; Prince Emil Von Haldenwald, William Faversham; Octave, Duc de Vigny-Vollante, Frederick Bond; the Marquis of Normandale, J. W. Piggott; the Earle of Caryston-Leigh, Bruce McRae; Grimithorpe, Henry W. Montgomery; Martin, Edwin Mordant. 3. THE MIRROR cannot compare two actors who have appeared in the same role to satisfy mere curiosity as to its opinion.

A. L. K., Dorchester, Mass.: 1. There is always room in vaudeville for good turns of every kind, and if you have a really good act the managers will be glad to welcome you. The good female impersonators are few and far between, as it requires a peculiar talent to do an act of this kind so as to entertain without giving offence. If you have a good voice and a good wardrobe and plenty of talent there is no reason why you should not make a hit. It is more than likely that you will be able to see Stuart, the male Patti, and Herbert Crowley, who are considered leaders in this line of business, at Keith's, Boston, during the season. By observing their methods you can tell whether your work will compare favorably with theirs and also see the effect their efforts have upon the audience. 2. If you intend following this line, attendance at a dramatic school would not help you in the least. 3 There are a number of excellent schools of dancing in New York city. You can obtain their addresses by consulting the advertising columns of THE MIRROR.

THE USHER

It is a hopeful indication that the public is showing a lively interest in theatricals thus early in the new season. Not only in this city, but in all parts of the country where playhouses have opened, the receipts are reported to be better than they were a year ago. Playgoers seem to have acquired an appetite for the theatre again—that is, for amusement of the worthy sort; the inferior attractions are doing no better than usual.

New York's hotels are crowded with buyers and strangers, and their patronage will help out the large number of playhouses that are opening their doors before the usual time. September is likely to prove a prosperous month if weather conditions are favorable. The unprecedented coolness of the Summer lends strength to the fear that September may be warmer than usual.

General conditions are favorable to a better theatrical season than the last, provided the managers give the public enough good plays to efface the mediocrity—or worse—of last season's supply.

♣

In this connection the Philadelpha Ledger recently cast a look backward and characterized the dramatic year and its developments severely.

"The managerial scheme of last year's stage productions," it observed, "was apparently that of ignoring the assumption of the playgoer's intelligence; not infrequently the playgoer's sense of decency. Our local stage during nearly all the season was flooded, waist deep frequently, not with plays, but shows, so inane, senseless and meaningless that the intelligence, taste and often the morality of the patrons of the theatre revolted against it and were insulted by their inanity, coarseness, vulgarity and indecency. Now and again an actor or actress, and a good one, was permitted by the managers to appear before the footlights; but their visits were so few and far between as painfully to accentuate the pitiable condition of the stage."

It is not likely that the managers, even if they read aright last season's lesson, will be able to change the whole character of theatricals in a year. But they have had ample food for thought this Summer, and those among them that are wise will turn their efforts into proper channels, at least.

♣

The Chicago theatre managers have been given an extension of sixty days to complete the structural changes in their buildings required by the new theatre regulations. Originally compliance was demanded by Sept. 1. In several cases this was found to be impossible, and the Mayor and Council agreed to extend the date to Nov. 1, after receiving a petition from the managers. Meanwhile, the managers are obliged to furnish bonds to insure obedience, and to agree to close their theatres if the alterations are not completed by the date named.

Here in New York the requirements of the authorities have been met more expeditiously than in Chicago, possibly because they were of a reasonable and practical character. All our theatres have passed under a rigid inspection, and in all cases improvements were ordered.

It is not too much to say that New York's theatres to-day are fifty per cent. safer than they were a year ago. Protection against fire and facilities for egress have been vastly increased.

♣

Shakespeare has always stood as the actors' patron saint, but it seems that they have a genuine one, elevated to the state of sanctification by due ecclesiastical authority. Stephen Fiske furnishes this information in the following interesting way:

"How many actors know that they have a patron saint? They have—his name is St. Genesius, and his day is the 26th of August—Friday of last week. Actors were of so little importance at the time their saint was made that the encyclopædias may be searched in vain for any account of his martyrdom. He was, like Roscius, an actor in Rome, and when he was converted to Christianity the noble Romans doomed him to death, just as the Christians afterward doomed heretics. There is in London a Free Mason club of actors, called the Genesius, in honor of the saint; it meets every Sunday morning, and is practically a lodge of instruction. Except this, I know of no professional recognition of the first actor who suffered for being too good—there have been other instances, but not in our day. The suggestion is in order, therefore, that St. Genesius Day—the Actors' Day—should be celebrated wherever there is a theatre."

♣

The Paris Figaro recently aroused a ferment by asking the question, "Why are English actresses more virtuous than French?" The discussion that has followed develops rancor and recriminations. It does not appear that the Figaro's brutal characterization of the women of the French stage is either justified or timely. As well ask why a lower grade of morality exists generally among Parisians than among Londoners or New Yorkers? If women of the French stage are less circumspect than their English sisters—and that is open to question—it is likely that the comparatively small salaries paid by French managers and the heavy expense actresses are put to in furnishing costly gowns may go a long way toward accounting for it. As the Times says: "One such fact is worth a thousand theories as to morals and geography, or virtue and the artistic temperament."

Scott Craven, the talented young English actor who spent three years in this country as a member of leading companies, including those of Viola Allen and Mrs. Fiske, is now playing the part originated by Frederick Kerr Mandeville, in the London production of Letty. This is said to be the one strong acting part in Mr. Pinero's play.

In another direction, too, Mr. Craven is beginning to make a name for himself. For some time he has cherished literary ambitions, to which his friends have urged him to give rein. Grant Richards, the London publisher, is about to bring out a volume by Mr. Craven called "Poems in Divers Keys." Several of these poems have recently appeared in The Literary World and other magazines, and have attracted a great deal of attention.

One English critic, Sir Alfred Lyall, declares Mr. Craven's poems to be the best that have been published serially in many years, and predicts a brilliant future for the young poet.

WILLIAM BRAMWELL.

On this page appears a recent portrait of William Bramwell, who last evening (Monday) began in New York his starring tour in Victor Mapes' play, Captain Barrington. Mr. Bramwell is under the management of Henri Gressitt, with whom he has signed a five years' contract. It is an odd coincidence that Mr. Bramwell made his debut on the stage under Mr. Gressitt's management eight years ago, and now makes his debut as a star under the same manager.

Mr. Bramwell has had an unusual and an interesting career. Being the son of a Methodist clergyman, he was in his youth schooled for the church. Later he studied law and was admitted to the bar. But he found little of interest to him in legal practice, and presently abandoned the bar for the stage—for which field he had long cherished an ambition. His success as an actor was immediate and striking.

During the past three years Mr. Bramwell has played exclusively in New York and has gained wide popularity here. He has appeared with marked success in such widely different roles as Macbeth, Romeo, Iago, Sir John Oxon in A Lady of Quality, and John Storm in The Christian. His versatility makes him admirably suited to play the dual roles of Lieutenant Fielding and Captain Barrington in the play chosen for his stellar debut. The tour will embrace most of the larger cities of the country, in the majority of which Captain Barrington has never been presented.

MISS WYCHERLY IN YEATS PLAYS.

Margaret Wycherly announced last week that she has secured the American and Canadian rights to all the plays written by William Butler Yeats, the Irish poet, and that she will present several of them in the larger cities of the country during the coming season. Her repertoire at the outset will consist of The Land of Heart's Desire, The Hour Glass, and Kathleen Ni Hoolihan. Later she will present a new play by Yeats which is not yet completed. The season will begin in Boston about the middle of November. Miss Wycherly has won high favor in leading roles in the standard drama, and last Winter she alternated with Edythe Wynne Matheson in the title-role of Everyman, under Ben Greet's management.

ACTORS IN ACCIDENT.

A special train on the Boston and Maine Railway, bearing The Eternal City company and the More To Be Pitied Than Scorned company, collided with a freight train at Fitchburg, Mass., on Aug. 21. Of the sixty-five passengers, thirty-two were slightly injured. In most cases the injuries were merely bruises and only four or five of the players required medical attention.

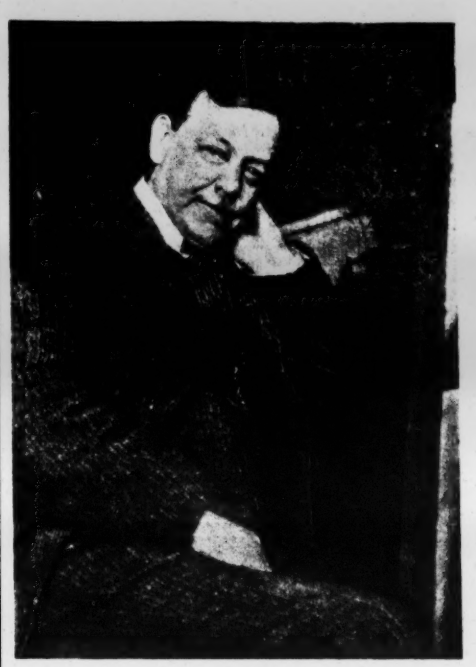
PERSONAL



CRAVEN.—John T. Craven, whose picture appears above, will on Sept. 3 close his engagement with the Castle Square Stock company, Boston, where he has been the comedian for four consecutive years. After the termination of his engagement Mr. Craven will remain for awhile in Boston.

MILLARD.—Evelyn Millard, the English actress, who has been absent from the stage for some time, has accepted an engagement with Lewis Waller to play a leading part in bis coming production of The Master of the King's Company at the Imperial Theatre, London.

BONSTELLE.—Jessie Bonstelle closed her long Summer stock engagement at the National Theatre, Rochester, on Aug. 20. At the final performance the house was crowded with enthusiastic admirers of Miss Bonstelle, and she was obliged to make a speech of farewell. After the performance an elaborate supper was given, at which all the members of the company were present.

HARTEL.—Andreas Hartel, superintendent of the Edwin Forrest Home, has returned to his post after a few weeks' rest at Atlantic City. For some months past he has not been in robust health. The change benefited him greatly.

CARYLL.—Ivan Caryll, composer of many successful English musical comedies, arrived in New York last week from London, to spend a fortnight's vacation in this and other American cities. This is his first visit to the United States in fourteen years.

HERBERT.—Galwey Herbert, the new stage manager of the Royalty Theatre, London, arrived in that city two weeks ago from a tour as a member of Daniel Frawley's company, covering nine months through Australia, New Zealand and South Africa. Mr. Herbert played Wilfred in Secret Service and other boy parts.

IBSEN.—It is reported from Copenhagen that Henrik Ibsen is at work on a drama with war as its motive. He is said to oppose Tolstoi's ideas as to war, holding that the vocation of the soldier is necessary to teach discipline and resisting power.

ELLIOTT.—Maxine Elliott, whose portrait appears on the first page, will return this week from England, where she and her husband, N. C. Goodwin, have passed the Summer at their country place, and will immediately begin preparations for her coming starring tour.

GANTHONY.—Richard Ganthony is in New York for a few months' visit, with the purpose of placing three plays—one for female star, one for juvenile man, and one for stock company purposes.

STANDING.—Herbert Standing, long a member of Sir Charles Wyndham's company, has been engaged for one of the leading roles in support of Cecilia Loftus in The Serio-Comic Governess.

ANGLIN.—Margaret Anglin will arrive in New York to-day (Tuesday) from Europe, and will immediately begin rehearsals in The Eternal Feminine, in which she is to star this season under Frank L. Perley's management.

CONRIED.—Heinrich Conried is a passenger aboard the Kaiser Wilhelm der Grosse, which, it is expected, will arrive at this port to-day (Tuesday).

GRIMM.—Moritz Grimm, the eminent musical director, who has been engaged by Henry W. Savage to conduct the performances of Parsifal in English, alternating with Walter H. Rothwell, arrived in New York last Thursday on the Graf Waldersee, having come direct from Bayreuth.

DROUET.—Robert Drouet returned to New York last week, after a very successful Summer season as leading man of the Broadway Theatre Stock company, Denver, and was immediately engaged by Frank L. Perley to play the principal male role of Lysander, in The Eternal Feminine, supporting Margaret Anglin.

FITCH.—Clyde Fitch was slightly injured last Wednesday in an automobile accident near his Summer home at Cos Cob, Conn. In order to avoid a collision, he turned his machine into a ditch beside the road. He and his butler, who was with him, were thrown out and both were considerably scratched and bruised. The machine was completely wrecked.

Bird Center—Drama, Musical Comedy and Melodrama—Doings of Actors.

(Special to The Mirror.)

CHICAGO, Aug. 29.

Last (Sunday) night Bird Centre had its opening in Chicago at the Grand Opera House. Glen MacDonough's dramatized form of Mr. McCutcheon's quaint and amusing personages that have graced the funny pages of the Western papers was given a week's trial in adjacent towns, opening in Peoria, and was in good shape for Chicago. Last night's big audience enthusiastically received the play and many curtain calls were given at the end of the third act. There is much good comedy and many strong situations in the play, and it looks as if it were on for a run. Edward J. Connelly as the Mysterious Stranger and Will Archie as Boy Greene made the personal hits of the evening. The cast follows:

Captain Roscoe Fry	George Richards
Cyrus Hornbeck	William Burress
Riley Peters	Charles Wayne
Gus Figgey	Eugene O'Rourke
Smiley Greene	Louis Payne
J. Milton Brown	Samuel Colt
Tom Hornbeck	Clayton Legge
Chris Newbower	Frank Todd
The Mysterious Stranger	Edward J. Connelly
Wilbur Fry	Al. Hoevet
Orville Peters	Andrew McLeod
Florence Nightingale Greene	Ipha Dahl
Sheridan Grant Greene	Will Archie
Kate Fry	Mabel Strickland
Mrs. Riley Withersby	Estelle Mortimer
Mrs. J. Milton Brown	Blanche Chapman
Mrs. Smiley Greene	Rose Cooke
Miss Cousins	Maida Athens
Miss Meadows	Grace Fields
Miss Maltby	Sue Kelleher
Miss Barnard	Loretta Macdonald
Miss Applegate	Stella Beardsley
Miss Matlock	Susie Pitt
Miss Burbank	Carolyne Fostelle
Miss Pickett	Clara Pitt

Inevitable comparison of the performances of Dave Lewis and Sam Collins as Lamphauser in The Royal Chef caused some unexpected complications. Collins, with a few rehearsals, succeeded Lewis Monday as the comedian of the New York cast, which was installed for the closing week of the engagement here. Lewis had played the part only seventeen weeks and had worked out all the details with the considerable cleverness which he has and the commendable thoroughness which he usually shows as an actor. Both have lovely voices, but Lewis sank himself deeper into the pathos of "Let Me Go Back," the exiled alderman's touching plea in melody for liberty to go back to Chicago. After two performances by the New York cast there was talk of sending Lewis to New York instead of Collins, and the question was to have been settled Friday night. At last accounts it was not, and Collins was insisting on the fulfillment of his contract. Meanwhile Lewis is about twice as big as he was, in the opinion of several wise persons.

The series of seven matinees of Buster Brown at the Great Northern last week was a great success. The house was sold out every afternoon and people turned away. The evening houses were good.

Raymond Hitchcock and The Yankee Consul continue to fill the Studebaker, frequently to overflowing. The crowd at matinees that has to go away without admission has been at times almost as large as the audience. The stay of Woodlands, which will begin its engagement next Monday, is indefinite, but I hear that George Ade's College Widow is due late in October.

William A. Brady has decided to personally direct the rehearsals of the big crowd that fills the pit in the pit scene of The Pit. The play will open the considerably rebuilt McVickers next Saturday night, and Mr. Brady threatens to have 500 people on the stage in the great climax. He has advertised for an army of supers. The cast remains about the same as at the Garrick. Kingsley Benedict will play the juvenile, Charles Lane the heavy, and A. H. Stuart and Marian Chapman will be in the cast. Negotiations are under way between Charles Richman and W. A. Brady with a view to engaging Mr. Richman for the lead in a second Pit company.

C. B. Bradford arrived ahead of Wang and at once began trying to convince the wild Western Chicagoan that Wang is the father of a whole family of comic operas, including King Dodo, Isle of Spice, and numerous other successes wherein His Majesty wears his crown over near one ear.

Lewis Parker, manager of the Grand Opera House, Brooklyn, and general representative of Hyde and Behman, has come out to look after the opening of the Vaudeville, formerly Iroquois, set for Sept. 19.

D. H. Hunt and J. H. Sosman, of Sosman and Landis, have gone to Pittsburgh to install a new scenic theatre presenting the World's Fair in miniature at the Pittsburgh Exposition. Before leaving Mr. Hunt said the firm has recently received more orders for scenery than they had expected in moments of greatest confidence, and predicted that the current season would be one of great prosperity after all.

John D. O'Hara, formerly of the Players' Stock at the Bush Temple, where he won high praise as a character actor, has been engaged with his wife, Margaret Macklyn, for the new Majestic Theatre Stock at San Francisco under the management of Oliver Morosco, opening about Sept. 12. Grace Reals is leading woman there.

Jeff DeAngelis, Adele Ritchie, Hubert Wilkie, Julie Sand, Frank Rushworth and the McCoy Sisters are to be in the cast of Shubert's production of Fantana, says Press Representative Gerson. Besides Fantana, the first productions of Taps, with the Kelcey-Shannon company, and Man and Superman, with Robert Lorraine, are booked for the Garrick.

Amelia Bingham has made The Climbers successful at Powers' this time with a cast of exceptional ability. The stage settings, especially the dinner scene, are hardly in keeping with a first-class theatre, and between the funeral and the suicide in the play there is a lot of stuff that is not entertaining. The good situations that fall to the lot of Charles Richman as Warden, Frank Worthing as Sterling, and Iva Troutman as Miss Godesby are acted with marked ability and the thoroughness of artists. It seems that Miss Troutman could hardly be excelled in the delineation of that sort of a feminine character. Miss Bingham is excellent in instances as Mrs Sterling, but her woman's intuition or her mastery of the act of acting does not seem to enable her to successfully thread the complicated emotions of the tortured wife. Mrs. Goldfinch was an excellent Miss Hunter, and Adelyn Wesley drew a stage portrait of Mrs. Hunter that was distinct and effective, but marred by a little low comedy. Grace Barton as Jessica Hunter, Moselle Tatum as Clara, and Grace Chester as Miss Sillerton gave good performances, and the clever bits of the servants in the dining-room scene were well done by Charles Hayne, Frank Edwards, and Thomas F. Fallon. The Climbers will run till Thursday, when The Frisky Mrs. Johnson will be put on. The production of The Vital Issue has been deferred.

John Dillon, the comedian, and Erwin Conelly and company are giving a complimentary performance this afternoon at the Studebacker of a society caper called Papa's Boy.

Millard Reed, formerly of the Broadhurst productions, has been engaged as stage director of the Calumet Theatre, South Chicago, which will open Sept. 4. The company, which will be a stock organization, includes Coral Congleton, Virginia Elwood, Jennie Calif, Carrie Belle Mille, Myrtle Bigden, Will E. Sherwood, Frederick Noonan, Andy Waldron, Dave Morris, Thomas Dale and D. P. Porter. Manager Connors will open his season with A Woman's Revenge.

Manager Max Weber, of the Columbus, has improved the general appearance of the entire city with the brilliant white front he has given his theatre The height and ornamental architecture lend themselves nicely to the decoration, and should stimulate civic pride down along Wabash. Following Hello, Bill, this week, Manager Weber has booked At the Old Cross Roads, Finnigan's Ball, with Gallagher and Barret, and a special production of A Modern Viking.

L. E. Pond, manager of Dave Levis' Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde company, was in town last week arranging for the local engagement of the attraction

Herbert Duce came to town representing The Pit and, incidentally, Wang. Look out for your "incident," Mr. Duce, for it may prove the event.

Cuba Niblo will play the title-role in Rowland and Clifford's Dora Thorne, and Isabelle Sherman, who was one of the most capable and popular members of the New American stock, will be in the company. Helen Wilton and Zach Evans have joined also.

Paul J. Brandt, the new manager of the Grand Opera House at New Albany, Ind., formerly Matt Kusell's house, has been busy in Chicago lately arranging for the season. Hugo Goldsmith, formerly with the Ethel Barrymore and Julia Marlowe companies, is associated with Mr. Brandt. Harry Montague, James Madison and Mr. Brandt used to run the Odeon, in Baltimore.

R. E. Magnus' Everyman has been booked by Manager George Dent at Manager June's Warrington Theatre, Oak Park, for Sept. 23.

Lew Sully found J. C. Miron's range at the Chicago Opera House one afternoon last week, but every time Sully landed a hit in the basso box it was Miron that exploded, and the audience was treated to rich, heavy, sonorous laughter. Sully's monologue would be a bigger hit than ever if he could catch a big basso like that every time.

The scenery for the Vaudeville—formerly Iroquois—is being painted in this city, and is to be ready this week.

There will be fifteen class five theatres and five class four ("halls") theatres in Chicago this season, including the vaudeville houses.

George E. Gill reports an unprecedented incident at the Bijou, where his A Little Outcast, with Annie Blanke, opened last Sunday afternoon. A heavy rain storm struck the city late in the afternoon, and it became so severe later on that a grand total of thirty-two purchasers of tickets did not come or ask to have their money back. It seldom rains as hard as that for the melodrama patrons.

Frances Swartz, a pupil of Professor Ridge's stage school has signed as leading soubrette with the Lyman Twins in At the Races.

The guarantee of Vivian's Papas for its two nights at the suburban Summer park theatre at Ravinia Park was $2,500, according to several good authorities. Anyhow, the size of the certainty was the topic of many buzzing conversations in inner circles.

The Illinois and Garrick are dark this week. The bills at the theatres open are: Grand, Bird Center; Powers', Amelia Bingham's company, in The Climbers and Frisky Mrs. Johnson; Studebaker, Yankee Consul, with Raymond Hitchcock, fourth and closing week; McVicker (opens Saturday), The Pit, with Wilton Lackaye; Columbus, Hello, Bill!" Great Northern, Under Southern Skies; Peoples' (opens Saturday), stock, in Jim the Penman; Alhambra, Too Proud to Beg; Bijou, At Cripple Creek; Criterion, Flaming Arrow; Avenue, Escaped from Prison.

John P. Lockney, of A Hidden Crime, has written a new melodrama, which he will put out next season, jointly starring himself and Pauline Fletcher. Mr. Lockney is in Chicago preparing to open his season at Aurora next Saturday.

Lillian French, a bright member of the Royal Chef company, at the La Salle, joined the Chef company that was engaged for New York.

Sam Forrest has been engaged as general manager of The Forbidden Land this season, and his wife, Mamie Ryan, will retain her prominent part in the company. The opera has an excellent route of week stands in leading Western cities.

Carloads of excursionists from St. Louis, 500 on one train over the Chicago & Alton recently, and visiting Knights Templar en route to San Francisco, whither the Rock Island & the Northwestern road sent out dozens of trainloads, helped make business good at downtown theatres.

The Peoples' will open next Saturday with Jim the Penman, by the new stock company, instead of Prisoner of Zenda. S. S. Simpson is stage manager.

ST. LOUIS.

Fair Still Flourishing—Blanche Bates Honored—Successful Summer Shows.

(Special to The Mirror.)

ST. LOUIS, Aug. 29.

In the World's Fair city the fair continues to boom and the weather to behave itself. Crowds from every point of the compass arrive by every train and the passenger car famine is on. It was predicted early in the year by men not in the railroad business; but such prophets, we know, are not without honor save in their own country. In the case of a city of over 700,000 inhabitants which tries to gather within its gates all the footloose people of the earth in seven months, a traffic congestion was certain, and we are having it here, although we told the whole world to come, are ready for it, and made whatever preparations we could to "make good." The city is full to overflowing, but by a convenient device we shall move the city limits out into the country about 50 miles, and thereby find room for the wayfaring man in due season.

Never before in history has the social and organizational life of the country received such exploitation as is now the case in St. Louis. One wonders, in reading the names of the societies that have come and are still due to arrive here, what will be the purpose for which men, women and children will next band together. For instance, one day the people of the Keystone State held the center of the stage. They had the freedom of the grounds and the State officers, from Governor Pennypacker to the smallest attaché on his staff, had the day of their lives. There were thousands of them; yes, counting the First Troop of Philadelphia City Cavalry, Col. John C. Groome, commanding, bearskin cap, chevrons, medals and all, there must have been tens of thousands of them. Marching with bearskin caps, the on-looking bareskin Igorrotes had the bulge on the situation, but the Pennsylvanians were not all. Up in the Stadium, more than two miles from the parade ground, were the Y. M. C. A. boys, in their handicap meet. On a dozen bandstands crack regimental and civilian bands held forth. The Plaza and surrounding spaces are so big that when these bands played at once the music did not interfere. Among the competitors were, mentioning a few, the Scout Band, the Philippine Band, the Mexican Band, the Second Infantry Band, the Pinney Band, the massed bands in Machinery Gardens; and the rests were played by the Well Band. At each of the big State buildings there were concerts, both vocal and instrumental, followed by receptions and luncheons. In Festival Hall a grand concert, with organ, was in progress. The Brazilians had a swell affair, with music, at their fairy palace near Administration Hill. The Boston Band followed President Francis about the grounds and at appropriate intervals played patriotic airs. The Festival Orchestra, under Komzak of Wien, held forth in their pavilion. In the smaller plazas there was an unusual military display. The Boer war was fought over again. Shungopavi, the Cliff Dweller medicine man, duplicated all the late Herrmann's tricks, and, for the Pennsylvanians, made anthracite coal of good quality out of mineral water. There was an international congress of deaf mutes in Congress Hall, a stereopticon exhibition in the Alaska Building, the memory of the eminent Missourian, Gallaudet, was specially honored; 90,000,000 gallons of filtered Mississippi water were shot over the Cascades. 200,000 electric and 10,000 arc lamps were lighted at night, nearly 150,000 persons passed the turnstiles; and, while all of this was going on, all the downtown theatres were doing excellent business. This, in barest outline, is only the happenings at the Fair for a day, beginning at 8 a. m. and ending at 11.30 p. m. The Pike held its own against all comers and is steadily gaining in public favor. Never before was there at public disposal such an amusement street. They call it with pride "the ten-million dollar Pike," and it looks and is worth the money. All told, there are over half a hundred concessions. While competition for business is keen among them, every one seems to think that there will be a good thing in the situation for all who go about it right from now on.

There was no change at either the Olympic or the Century last night, Frank Daniels and Blanche Ring continuing to appear in The Office Boy and Vivian's Papas, respectively. The members of both the companies put in all their spare time at the Fair, and whatever special features their visits developed were duly chronicled in the local press. Mr. Daniels' new gags please his audiences. The Office Boy is practically a new entertainment. Harry Conor, at the Century, is the same unctuous comedian of former years, and did not know until this time how many friends he has in St. Louis. Those Sunday night openings of ten years ago in Hoyt farces at the Grand Opera House, in George McManus' time, are not even now forgotten by the old-timers, and memories of Conor in those days are revived by his present sojourn here. Blanche Ring has announced that she would like to star in Irish melodrama of the good old Augustus Pitou-Chauncey Olcott sort, and an enterprising local scribe has already sketched a play for her. Cartoons and comments in abundance have been used to exploit the fair Blanche's intermittent fancy in this particular.

The Darling of the Gods and Blanche Bates continue properly to hold the centre of the World's Fair stage at the Imperial. Had Mr. Belasco succeeded in getting a bigger house than the bijou Imperial, handsome as it is, he would have made the theatrical hit of the World's Fair year and the season. With the Japanese people occupying so much of the world's attention, The Darling of the Gods is well chosen. There is no doubt about its being well staged and well played. During the past week Blanche Bates celebrated her twenty-seventh birthday. On Thursday afternoon she gave a reception to her professional and army friends. She is a great favorite in army circles of the Pacific Coast and was the belle of the balls at the Presidio. In the evening she was made the subject of an ovation at the theatre from the members of the company. At the close of the performance Mr. Belasco called her up over the long distance 'phone from New York and expressed his felicitations and a hearty commendation for her excellent work in St. Louis. The production is running smoothly to the best of business.

At the Odeon, the Kiralfy Louisiana Purchase spectacle seems to have weathered the first storms of adversity. The big production develops consistent draught, expecially toward the close of the week. Fred. V. Bowers does his musical act, the radium dance scintillates, La Mora dances in true Gallic style, and Bolossy's pony ballet is successful. Some discernment has trickled into the management in the making of special prices on "bargain days," and the result is that more money is made. Bolossy himself admits that although he has grown old and gray in the business, there is just as much experimentation about it as there ever was, and the stay in St. Louis this year is no variance from the rule.

The railroads report a steady, heavy increase in the passenger business, and excursions of fifteen hundred to two thousand persons from as far West as Los Angeles, as far North as Minneapolis, and as far south as Jacksonville, Fla., are now of daily occurrence. California early took kindly to the Fair. The yellow badges of the Golden State folks have been conspicuous in the exhibition palaces, the State buildings and the Pike, almost from the beginning, and are now seen in increasing numbers. While these excursions are made up largely of people from the smaller cities, the farmer is coming already—the honest, horny-handed son of toil, who, as he himself claims, has often saved the nation, and at last must do everything that's worth doing or has to be done. The honest farmer is bending his steps hitherward, and will be more numerous still once his crops are safe—although, speaking of crops, the cool Summer, the coolest in many years, has not been conducive to large profits in the farm industry. In connection with the evident increase in the Fair business, the fact that St. Louis is not overcrowded, and not likely to be, and that prices of living comforts have had to come down under competition, is also becoming apparent. The situation, therefore, is more and more encouraging, and signs are abundant that the setback and the losses of the opening weeks of the Fair will be more than retrieved.

Concerts of merit are given afternoon and evening in all the larger State buildings. Prominent musicians and singers from the several commonwealths take part, and these functions are characterized by much social smartness. The big coming Fair feature is Missouri Week, Aug. 22-27. The Mayors of all the leading towns of the State are calling on the citizens by proclamation and otherwise to abandon the conventional affairs of life during the six days and nights comprising Missouri Week and repair to the metropolis, thus testifying their devotion to the crowning achievement of civilization in the territory of the Louisiana Purchase.

The Delmar Garden Louisiana is also looking up. Business from the start was good, but nothing commensurate with the first quality of the production. Since then, by the self-sacrificing labors of Hiram Wenclslaus Hayes, the whole thing has been moved onto a higher plane. Hayes' labors are worthy of a better environment, and he will get it if he has only part of his way this Winter. There are no important changes in the company, and the chances seem to be that the present Delmar entourage will remain until the close of the season, which is not so very far off. A number of rather chilly nights lately were the best indication of the brevity of the present amusement Summer. On Tuesday last the entire company, from president to call-boy, had an outing on Creve Couer Lake. During the afternoon the lake was turned into a part of the Mississippi, which figures prominently in the book of the Delmar Louisiana. Davy Crockett led the Pathfinders and Pontiac did a turn in the canoe, and the Medicine Men found good old mountain dew and, having tasted it, gave the remainder to those near the point of discovery. The surprise of the day came when from a rocky height the figure of President Jannopoulo was discerned clad as a bandit from Anatolia. He made a very life-like figure, Mr. Jannopoulo being a Greek by birth and familiar with the ways of his picturesque but unlawful countrymen. He sang "On Yonder Rock Reclining" in a bass voice, amid much merriment.

Buster Brown, the new picture page comedy, went on at the Grand yesterday. The part of Buster is played with much cleverness by Master Gabriel, a midget actor who is not too assertive. He and his dog Tige do many stunts that please the young folks and do not weary their elders. The performance meets expectations, and there are in it enough laughs to suit all tastes. When the advance sale opened there was little doubt of a series of large audiences. Packed houses are sure to greet Buster Brown all week. The little strangers in town insist on seeing it. Tige, the dog, is played by George All.

At the Crawford Human Hearts went on last night. It belongs to the same school of stirring and at times tearful melodrama of which the Crawford patronage can never get a surfeit. Hal Reid wrote to some purpose when he constructed this, the first of his plays. It is an Arkansas pastoral, and being near Arkansas ourselves, many of us are evincing more than a passing interest in it.

On the Bridge at Midnight is Manager Garen's offering at Havlin's. George Klimt climbed to great melodramatic heights when he essayed this venture of the uncertain hour. As its name indicates, the draw is worked realistically when the clock hands meet, revenge is dealt out with no unsparing fingers and the villain is foiled before the birth of the new day. Thrilling climaxes have been earnestly interspersed throughout the piece and scenery and elocution both conjoin to work upon the attention of the house.

Blanche Ring has heard by cable from George Edwardes of the London Gaiety that he wants the Vivian's Papas MS. for inspection. She has also called down the dramatic editor of The Star for saying that her play is of immoral tendency. The idea!

"The most popular chorus girl" has arrived in town. She is Julia Mooney of the Piff, Paff, Pouf company of New York who was voted to be the most popular member of the chorus, the prize being a two weeks' stay at the Fair. The balloting was among the seat-holders, and Miss Mooney, who is just sixteen, proved an easy winner. The little miss came with her mother, and Jerry Hunt, of the C. & A., stole a march on the Wabash folks who brought her in by meeting the party at the station. They are stopping at the Washington Hotel, from which they can view at night the illumination of the Fair and reach it quickly during the day.

Saturday was Liberal Arts Day at the Fair. Complimentary tickets to the Pike were distributed by exhibitors to visitors and great use was made of them. The attendance last Saturday broke all records. Up to midnight the week showed a total of nearly 800,000.

Season Opens Auspiciously—The Eternal City's Success—Gossip.

(Special to The Mirror.)

BOSTON, Aug. 29.

One more house opens to-night for the regular season and all the others which will open at present will fall into line a week later. The Gaiety—née Columbia—will not begin before the middle of October. Nothing whatever has been said about the date of reopening the Hub or Boston Music Hall.

The Colonial was one of the last to close, and it is also early in opening. There was a good audience present to-day to see The Southerners, which was given with few changes of cast from the presentation in New York. Junie McCree was well received as the leading comedian, and Elfie Fay and Vinie Daly easily took the honors among the ladies in the cast. It is a regular Lederer show, with the addition of colored singers, who scored a hit.

The House That Jack Built is the best play of the summer seen at the Castle Square, and has a much better presentation than it had downtown at higher prices a few seasons ago. It has been some time since Walter E. Perkins played a starring engagement at this house, but he was not forgotten and had a rousing reception. This is one of his best plays, and his paper-laying scene was exceedingly clever. This play, by the way, is little beyond an adaptation of The New Wing, which was played at the Columbia some ten years ago.

There is no question about the big hit which The Sho Gun has scored here and there is no question but that this is the most magnificent production that Mr. Savage has ever given in Boston. It has established a record which makes one forgive the unsatisfactory mise-en-scene of some of his earlier operas. This is simply gorgeous, and the Korean robes, the George Ade humor and the excellent company will pack the Tremont for weeks.

An exceedingly interesting revival of an old timer, not seen here in years, was made at the Bowdoin Square to-night when The Sea of Ice was given, with Charlotte Hunt in the leading character of Ogavite. The spectacular scenes were unusually elaborate for this house, but all were well given. The Long Strike is in rehearsal to follow.

There have been capacity houses at the Majestic all last week and The Eternal City has opened the new policy of higher prices most successfully. The company opened under a disadvantage, as it was in a wreck at Fitchburg on the way to Boston; but nobody was seriously injured, and the nervousness has all worn off. Edward Morgan repeats the great success which he made here in this play with Viola Allen, who has a worthy successor in Janet Waldorf.

The Fatal Wedding is one of the perennial favorites at the Grand Opera House, and it had a large audience to-night, when its fourth engagement here opened. Julia Ralph, who was a feature at Keith's only three weeks ago, has been added to the company, and the children who have so much to do with the leading scenes are exceedingly clever.

Next week will see these additional houses opened: Boston, Quincy Adams Sawyer; Park, Ezra Kendall, in Weatherbeaten Benson; Hollis, Sam Bernard, in The Girl from Kay's; Globe, Shore Acres.

Nance O'Neil begins her rehearsals at the Tremont very soon and will make a feature of a biblical tragedy by Thomas Bailey Aldrich, whose Mercedes gave Julia Arthur such fine opportunities a few years ago. The new piece will be produced at the Tremont in October. It is entitled The Tents of Assur and is said to be built around Judith. That will give her two Judith plays.

Ralph Edwards was on last week to complete the arrangements for the production of Parsifal in English. It is no easy matter to get a place for the rehearsals, and it may be necessary to hire a suburban theatre for several weeks, so as to have a sufficient amount of time.

Mary Sanders is back again from Europe, after a pleasant success there, and will make her reappearance at the Castle Square in Rose Michel. Howell Hansell will resume his old position as leading man in that production.

Mrs. E. G. Sutherland, the dramatist, returned from Europe on the Ivernia last week and went at once to her country home in New Hampshire. She will spend September at Siasconset, Nantucket, and return to her Commonwealth avenue home the first of October.

J. H. Emery, who has been manager of the Castle Square ever since that house has been the home of a stock company, retires at the conclusion of the present week, to be the business manager for Wright Lorrimer, whose tour in The Shepherd King opens in this city at the Majestic Oct. 3. Mr. Emery will take with him the best wishes of many Boston friends. Joseph F. Hall will be Mr. Lorimer's general press representative.

Clara Thompson is one of the recent additions to Nance O'Neil's supporting company. She will play the grand dames in the different productions.

Carleton Foster, formerly ticket agent at the Castle Square, has joined the Bennett-Moulton company to play heavies.

Thomas E. Shea changes his Boston theatre this season and plays at the Globe, instead of the Grand Opera House. He will be the first one to make a Shakespearean production there.

When E. H. Crosby, dramatic critic of the Post, was in Europe this Summer he made a trip to Macbeth's castle in Scotland, a place seldom visited, and an exceedingly interesting description was published last Sunday.

The Bernardi Stock Company has been incorporated with a capital of $1,000 and shares at a par of $5, to carry on a theatrical business. David M. Rubin, of Chelsea, is the president.

Many congratulations were sent by Boston theatrical men when it was learned that Charles MacGeachy had become a Benedict. The bride was Annie Delano Kipling, daughter of Mrs. Philip Hone and sister of Mrs. Leroy Jones.

BALTIMORE.

Hearts Adrift—The New Auditorium and Maryland—The Week's Bills.

(Special to The Mirror.)

BALTIMORE, Aug. 29.

The airship as a realism for melodrama has proven a success, as witnessed by the second prosperous season of the scenic melodrama which is seen at the Holliday Street Theatre this week. The company is unusually strong, headed by E. L. Snyder, as Captain Teddy, and the production in its entirety is elaborate. At the close of the week, How He Won Her.

The new Auditorium, which is being built by James L. Kernan, will be a very handsome theatre, beautifully decorated and frescoed in green relieved with ivory and gold. The general arrangements of the house will provide ease and comfort and many new improvements of most recent invention which are not yet possessed by any other Baltimore theatre will be noted. Massive brass railings and costly hangings and tapestries will add richness to the interior. The seating capacity of the house will be about 2,000, with comfort made a special study in the arrangement of the seats, which will be a new pattern opera chair of most convenient and luxurious design. The scenery and entire stage outfit is of the latest modern design and there have been ample arrangements made for the newest stage effects by an additional number of traps and other devices. The illumination will be electrical, in beautifully designed brass chandeliers, with ground glass globes to soften the light effects.

The Maryland, which opened last season in a partly unfinished condition, by reason of the haste with which it was completed, has been greatly improved. In order to facilitate the comfort and convenience of the public a new stairway has been constructed from the foyer direct to the mazzanine floor, which has been redecorated and supplied with new style revolving folding seats. The Turkish room, in which smoking will be permitted and the smoker may enjoy a cigar and the performance at the same time, is being decorated in Oriental style, which, with the richly upholstered divans and settees, will make it a most attractive place in which to lounge. The entire interior has been redecorated in a pleasing harmony of rich dark red, relieved with floral designs and ivory and gold. Many new exits have been provided, and the comfort of patrons thus greatly increased in taking their departure. There are now seven places of egress on each floor, a total of 28 exits which will lead into Franklin street, John alley and the new hotel which adjoins.

The summer parks, which it is said have been somewhat unfortunate on account of the frequent rains in July, will keep open for about one more month, the week of the celebration of Maryland being named as a probable closing date at River View, although the weather is the deciding factor. At Electric Park the vaudeville shows have proved a drawing feature and the end is not yet in sight.

Why Girls Leave Home—Notes of Opening Theatres.

(Special to The Mirror.)

WASHINGTON, Aug. 29.

Vance and Sullivan's new attraction, Why Girls Leave Home, a play of special strength and interest, teeming with stirring incidents, was received with extended favor by a very large audience on the opening night at the Academy of Music. The interpretation is in the hands of an excellent and painstaking company. The favorites, M'liss and Nellie McHenry, scored strongly during the past week. Hearts Adrift is the announcement for next Monday.

The Lafayette Theatre will reopen for the season Sept 5 with a Labor Day matinee, the attraction being Howard Kyle in James K. Hackett's production of On the Yellowstone. Manager Ira J. La Motte has returned from his Summer vacation and is personally superintending a large force of workmen who are busily engaged on the finishing touches to many improvements.

The future of the Empire Theatre is determined. Managers Kernan and Rife will keep the house dark, as the alterations to meet the requirements of the new building laws for public safety are too extensive. It was stated at the close of last season that the house would be entirely remodeled, but the plans have failed of realization.

The Seeman-Millican Louisiana Mardi Gras company remain for another week, giving their exhibition at the circus grounds, Fifth and H streets, Northeast. Adolph Seeman, Frederick Millican, and G. H. Van Arsdale are defendants in a damage suit for $10,000 brought by the parents of Robert Skidmore, a boy of ten years, who lost his life last Thursday by coming in contact with a live electric wire connected with the Ferris Wheel.

The Choral Society this season will present the work of the English composer, Edgar Elgar, The Dream of Gerontius, assisted by the Washington Symphony Orchestra. The Messiah and Verdi's Requium will also be given. JOHN T. WARDE.

PITTSBURGH.

Two Melodramas—The Harry Davis Stock Company—Notes.

(Special to The Mirror.)

PITTSBURGH, Aug. 29.

The Bijou did its customary large business today, both performances being well attended, and the play, The Factory Girl, seemed to have lost none of its popularity which it won at this house last season. Lon Haskell again heads the cast. The Child Slaves of New York comes next week.

Uptown, at the Empire, A Child of the Slums is seen for the first time in this city, and an audience of good size was present to-night. Next week Out of the Fold, another play new to this city, will be presented.

On next Monday three more of our nine theatres will begin their season, leaving but two more to open. The Duquesne will offer Foxy Grandpa, with Joseph Hart and Carrie De Mar, supported by a large company. The Avenue opens with the Harry Davis Stock Company, presenting Tess of the D'Urbevilles, and the Nixon, with Blanche Ring, in Vivian's Papas.

The Harry Davis Stock Company will, no doubt, be an excellent one, as the list of players will verify. Jane Kennark is the leading woman and William Courtney the leading man. The others are: Frederick Paulding, Howard Hickman, Charles Wyngate, Joseph Dailey, William McVay, Charles Melrose, Thomas Slater, Dennie Harris, Joseph Wighaman, Margaret Dill, Alice Gale, Emma Dunn and Effie Darling. Stage Director J. C. Huffman, who has been in New York city most of the summer attendant upon the players and plays for the new season, returned to-day when the first rehearsal was given under his personal direction.

Tunis F. Dean, who has been business manager for Harry Davis for several seasons past, returned to the city last Monday to act in the same capacity for this season. Mr. Dean is very well known and liked here in theatrical circles and his host of friends have been daily interrupting his business hours in his "den" to extend him a cordial welcome.

Alice Gale, who has been in Europe during the Summer, returned home last week. While in London Miss Gale was the guest of Mrs. T. P. O'Connor, wife of the distinguished Irish Member of Parliament.

The scenery and entire stage outfit at the Avenue is of the latest modern design.

The Pittsburgh Exposition opens next Wednesday evening. Creatore and his band will be the attraction in the newly decorated Music Hall.

Forepaugh & Sells Brothers' Circus will spread its tents in this city for one day—next Monday.

CINCINNATI.

Regular Season Opens—Closing of Summer Parks—A Waterless Coney Island.

(Special to The Mirror.)

CINCINNATI, Aug. 29.

The Walnut opened its season yesterday, with Foxy Grandpa as the bill. Joseph Hart and Carrie DeMar were seen to excellent advantage in their now familiar parts, and received excellent support from Tom Fortune, T. A. Conway, Louise Randolph, Glenwood White, Theresa Powers, Victor Lane, and Harry Webster. A number of new specialties and features were introduced for the first time. The Show Girl follows.

The Queen of the Highway is on view this week at Heuck's, and is attracting favorable attention from good sized audiences.

The Stain of Guilt, which was one of the big successes of last season at the Lyceum, is at that house again, and doing well.

The Kilties' Band is at the Zoo for a week's engagement.

This is the last week at Chester Park and the Lagoon, both of which close on Labor Day. Coney Island has already closed owing to lack of water in the river—a condition which generally manifests itself a week or two before the other parks are ready to close.

THE CAREER OF MRS. WATKINS.

Mrs. Rosina Watkins, the once famous actress, widow of Harry Watkins and mother of Amy Lee, died on Aug. 22 at the Edwin Forrest Home, where she had been a guest for the past five years. Until a week before her death she was in excellent health and was the life and spirit of the family at the Home. Suddenly she was stricken with Bright's disease, and after a few days of acute suffering she passed away. Miss Lee, who was playing in Cleveland, was notified of her mother's illness, and was with the sufferer during her last hours of life. The company of old players at the Home, now reduced to eight, is cast into deepest gloom by the death of Mrs. Watkins, who was greatly beloved by her associates there, and many an old playgoer will sincerely mourn for her who was in her day one of the most beautiful and accomplished actresses of the American stage.

The public career of Mrs. Watkins in America and England covered a period of more than fifty years. She was first known to the stage as Rosina Shaw, which was her maiden name, then as Mrs. Charles D. S. Howard, and finally as Mrs. Harry Watkins. In her professional work she ran the gamut of characterization from stage childhood to stage old-womanhood, and she appeared in every class of drama from lightest comedy to Shakespearean tragedy. Through all her long life her most noticeable characteristics were cheerful amiability, energy and whole-hearted enthusiasm. She carried the qualities even through her latter years, and her presence at the Edwin Forrest Home was a blessing to the other aged players who were her companions there.

Mrs. Watkins was born in Liverpool, England, on Dec. 30, 1829. Her father was John Shaw, a noted violinist and musical director of his time, and with him and her brother and two sisters she came to America when she was six years old. The brother was David T. Shaw, who composed "Columbia, the Gem of the Ocean." The sisters were Josephine Shaw, who was later the very popular actress, Mrs. John Hoey, and Mary Shaw. Not long after the arrival of the family in New York David, Rosina, and Mary Shaw made their appearance in concert, and having splendid voices they soon attracted attention and became favorite entertainers. They appeared in various cities, and were finally engaged by P. T. Barnum to give concerts in the old Apollo Rooms in New York. This engagement was brought to a sudden close by the marriage of Mary Shaw to A. L. Fogg.

After the death of her father, which occurred in 1842, Rosina Shaw decided to devote herself to dramatic work, and on June 5, 1844, she made her debut as an actress, with W. E. Burton's company at the Arch Street Theatre, Philadelphia, in the character of Harriet Arlington in The 100 Pound Note. For some time she remained at the Arch Street as the soubrette of the company, and there she played in support of Charlotte Cushman, W. A. Macready, and other noted stars. After leaving the Arch Street Theatre company she played a brief season at Niblo's Garden and then joined Thomas H. Hamblin's company at the old Bowery. She was a member of the company there when the famous old playhouse burned down, upon the occasion of E. L. Davenport's benefit

Upon the disbanding of the Bowery company Miss Shaw went to Albany to become a member of the company at Meech's Museum. Other members of the organization at that time were Mrs. Harry Hunt, afterward Mrs. John Drew; George Holland, and Mrs. Mestayer, afterward Mrs. Barney Williams. To the Museum came Charles D. S. Howard, the English actor, to play a three weeks' starring engagement in Shakespearean plays, and after a brief courtship he and Miss Shaw were married. Mr. Howard was many years the senior of his wife, and being a most accomplished actor he gave to her much valuable instruction in the art of the stage. Until the time of Mr. Howard's death in 1858 they acted together, and during that period Miss Shaw was known professionally as Mrs. Howard.

After the engagement in Albany Mr. and Mrs. Howard went to the Arch Street Theatre for a season; then to the Chambers Street Theatre, where Mrs. Howard shared honors with her sister, Mrs. John Hoey, in Dombey and Son and The Serious Family; then to the Winter Garden for a season, and then to the New Varieties, New Orleans, under Tom Placide's management, where they remained for three years.

Upon joining the company at the New Varieties Mrs. Howard was advanced to the position of leading woman—and she was the youngest leading woman of the time. She made brilliant successes as Constance in The Love Chase, as Juliet and as Lady Macbeth. She also appeared in such operatic roles as La Bayadere, and she triumphed in the leading roles of the burlesques Fortunio, The Fair One with Golden Locks, and The Island of Jewels. Her popularity at this time was tremendous. She was admired for her beauty, applauded for her accomplishments, and loved for her splendid qualities of mind and heart. The stockholders of the Varieties commissioned one of the greatest artists of the day to paint her portrait, and the picture hung in the lobby of the theatre until the building was destroyed by fire. Upon the occasion of her final benefit the directors presented to her a purse containing a large sum of money, and gifts and flowers were showered upon her. Among the players with whom she was associated at the Varieties were Henry and Thomas Placide, Charles Bass, Rufus Blake, Henry Lyman, and George Holland.

Mrs. Howard, after leaving New Orleans, appeared as a stock star in St. Louis, in Louisville, and at Burton's Theatre in New York. In the company that appeared with her at Burton's were John Brougham, C. W. Couldock, and Joseph Jefferson. Mrs. Howard then accepted an engagement at Barnum's American Museum, where Harry Watkins was stage-manager, and in 1860, two years after the death of Mr. Howard, she and Mr. Watkins were married. Shortly after their marriage Mr. and Mrs. Watkins went to England, and Mrs. Watkins made her London debut at the Lyceum in October, 1860, as Francini in Grist to the Mill. She won the favor of the British public at once, and after her engagement at the Lyceum she played at the Haymarket, under J. B. Buckstone's management, and then made a tour of the provinces, which was eminently successful.

Mr. and Mrs. Watkins returned to America in 1863, and on Aug. 6 of that year Mrs. Watkins reappeared on the local stage, at Wallack's Theatre, as Honora, in The Bride of an Evening. After the season at Wallack's, which was very successful, Mr. and Mrs. Watkins went on the road with a company of their own and presented a repertoire of popular plays. They continued to tour every season after that until 1884, when they decided to retire from regular work in their profession. Mrs. Watkins, after her decision to quit the stage, made a number of tours, playing in support of her daughter, Amy Lee. Her last appearance on the stage was with Miss Lee at the Girard Avenue Theatre, Philadelphia, in the role of Mrs. Wingrove, in The Little Rebel, in 1898.

Mr. Watkins died in January, 1894, and five years later Mrs. Watkins was received, by a unanimous vote of the Board of Directors, as a permanent guest of the Edwin Forrest Home. She took her place there on May 18, 1899, and from that time until her death her days were tranquil, happy and content.

The funeral services were held at the Home on last Thursday, Aug. 25, and the remains were buried in her own family plot in Laurel Hill Cemetery, Philadelphia, beside the grave of her father.

The Isle of Spice company, after long and successful engagements in Chicago and Boston, came finally to New York last week, and on Tuesday night opened the season at the Majestic Theatre. The opening was all that the most ambitious musical comedy impresario could possibly wish for. Every seat was occupied, the lobbies were filled with standees, the ticket speculator held forth boldly on the sidewalk, and in the course of the performance at least half a dozen songs gained half a dozen encores apiece. It was a noisy night, and was, therefore, indicative of success for the piece in New York.

The Isle of Spice belongs to that large, popular and ever-increasing class of musical entertainment that, while it occupies a prominent place on the American stage, has, as yet, no specific name. It is farce, comic opera, musical comedy, burlesque and spectacle rolled into one—the sort of thing that could be called a "Summer show" until it began to flourish in the Winter time. The plain, old, much-abused word "show" must now serve. The Isle of Spice is a show. It was put together by Allen Lowe and George E. Stoddard, librettists, and Paul Schindler and Ben Jerome, composers. It was staged by Gus Sohlke. Whatever the members of this quintette may lack in the matter of artistic feeling they make up for in their understanding of the wants of the public. The Isle of Spice is a long voyage away from any province of art, but it lies square in the track of commercial navigation.

As far as might be learned from the performance the plot of the piece is about as follows: Bompopka, King of Nicobar, has a habit of retiring his wives to a certain Tomb of Silence when they reach the age of thirty years, and when the play opens he is about to rid himself of Queen Kamorta in order that he may marry his ward Teresa, who is an heiress. At this juncture two sailors from the U. S. S. Roosevelt—Mickey O'Grady and Slubsy Mackinaw by name—land on the island from a war balloon, in which they have effected their escape from the ship. Bompopka and his subjects take them to be messengers from the sun. The sailors accept the situation gracefully and endeavor to win the supposed wealth of Bompopka by various gambling devices; whilst Bompopka, who is really bankrupt, strives to win the treasure that messengers from the sun should properly possess. Now to the island comes Lieutenant Harold Katchall, of the Roosevelt, in search of the two deserters. Instead of pursuing them, however, he devotes himself to making love to Teresa. So eloquent is he and so willing is she that at the last they depart from the island, betrothed to each other, leaving the fortune of Teresa as a balm for the lacerated feelings of King Bompopka. Just what becomes of the two sailors is not made clear, but it is to be presumed that they marry two of Bompopka's discarded queens.

The first act of the piece is charming The stage setting is beautiful; the story is carried forward with sufficient lucidity; the music is bright, and there are many very pretty groupings. In the second and third acts the scenery is more garish, the dialogue becomes largely a mess of stale interpolated jokes, and although the groupings are attractive and the movement brisk, the thing descends to the song-booming and commodity-advertising sort of "entertainment" that is, it must be admitted, still popular in New York. The beauty of the first act alone lifts the piece a bit above the average of productions of its class.

The music throughout is melodious and pleasing, though, of course, it never rises above the "popular" style. The best numbers are "Uncle Sam's Marines," "Mercenary Mary Ann," "Peggy Brady," and "The Goo Goo Man." The worst number is a doleful plaint entitled "Take Me Home." The work of Mr. Sohlke in mounting and staging the piece is to be highly commended. The stage pictures and novel effects of movement were admirably arranged.

The chorus of the company is one of the brightest and most animated that has been seen in New York in recent years. To this section of the organization is due most of the credit for whatever attractions the production may possess.

Alexander Clark was legitimately and successfully funny as Bompopka. George Fiske was a handsome Lieutenant Katchall, and he displayed in his several songs an excellent voice. Herbert Cawthorne as O'Grady and Gilbert Gregory as Mackinaw were amusing a good part of the time, and their first song and dance made one of the hits of the evening.

Blanche Buckner looked pretty and sang well in the role of Teresa. Maude Williams was a handsome Trinket and she sang the "Peggy Brady" song very effectively. Susie Forrester as Asbena, a very stout, Katisha-like, discarded queen, really acted and really presented a characterization—an achievement so unusual on the "show" stage of the day that the actress deserves a special word of thanks and praise.

The Garrick Theatre opened its doors for the season last Monday night with the first presentation in New York of an English version of Franz von Schonthan and F. von Schlicht's comedy entitled, in the original German, Im Bunten Rock. The present version is called Military Mad and was made by Leo Ditrichstein, who has formed the habit of providing, with great regularity, foreign farces for American consumption. The audience filled the little playhouse to rather more than its comfortable capacity, and throughout the evening there was a very great deal of genuine and hearty applause.

The German original of Military Mad was produced for the first time in America, after long popularity abroad, at the Irving Place Theatre in November of last year, and upon that occasion it was reviewed at length in THE MIRROR. Mr. Ditrichstein's version is, except for some considerable change in the first act, almost a literal translation. The principal female character has been transformed from widowhood to maidenhood, and some of the names have been altered. But in the main the comedy is the same. This loyalty to the original on the part of Mr. Ditrichstein was, it would seem, a slight mistake. German audiences, thoroughly familiar with the small quibbles and quirks of military life in the Fatherland, found much humor and many satirical thrusts in lines and situations that to an American audience have necessarily little meaning. Had Mr. Ditrichstein been less a translator and more an adapter Military Mad might have been a brighter, lighter thing than it is. Yet even as it stands it is a joyous affair and the audience found in it much to amuse.

The story of the play, briefly retold, is as follows: Karl Hartwig, formerly German consul in New York and now a resident of Babelsberg, Germany, where the entire action takes place, desires to make a match between his none-too-brilliant son, Hans, and his niece, Marian Lee, a very wealthy girl from Kentucky. His scheme is advancing nicely when, to his dismay, a number of officers, who are taking part in certain military manœuvres in the neighborhood, become uninvited guests at his house. Several of these officers instantly become suitors for the hand of Marian, and Hartwig, in a panic, appeals to Lieutenant Victor von Hoheneck, a notorious flirt, to pretend to make love to Marian, with the purpose of thus keeping the more serious love-makers at a distance. The result is that Lieutenant Victor and Marian become betrothed; Hans, left free, wins the hand of Betty von Hoheneck, whom he really loves; and Hartwig, utterly defeated in his match-making plans, is obliged at the last to give his blessing to the quartette as gracefully as may be.

The presentation of the play was commendable, inasmuch as the various roles were in the hands of players of experience and reputation, the mounting in good taste, and the stage-management well ordered according to technical standards. The German atmosphere was not, however, brought to the Garrick stage. The conditions involved in the story were, of course, thoroughly German, but the presentation was almost as thoroughly American—and the result was that Military Mad, with all its humorous virtues, seemed a play without a country.

Mr. Ditrichstein himself played the role of the hero, Lieutenant Victor. He was alert, full of gayety and spirit—and German to the core. Henry Kolker was General von Tross, the important rejected suitor of Marian, and he played with fine ease and dignity. He was not a German, however, at any moment. Henry V. Donnelly as Karl Hartwig, and George Henry Trader as the son, Hans, played with capital comedy spirit. Mr. Donnelly worked valiantly, and by employing his usual, and always admirable, fun-making tactics he tided over several points in the play that came perilously near dullness. His Americanism was pardonable, because, it must be remembered, Hartwig had been for many years in New York. Mr. Trader's impersonation was capital in all respects and he well deserved the considerable applause that he received. Thomas Wise gave a capital portrayal of bibulous Baron von Gollwitz; Giles Shine was a properly blustering Sergeant Krauss, and Herbert Eyling made the most of the small part of Vlassack.

Ida Conquest was a beautiful, and a beautifully gowned, Marian Lee, and she acted with charming grace. Except for many slips in the Southern dialect that she endeavored to employ, her impersonation was admirable. Elly Collmer played Betty von Hoheneck with delightful dash and spirit. Jennie Reiffart gave the capable, human, genial impersonation of Mrs. Becker, an old housekeeper, that was to be expected of her. Edith Barker did the best possible with the thankless part of Mrs. Winter. Margaret Sutherland, whose role of Angele was entirely in French, played with vivacity and was, moreover, exceedingly attractive in her maid's costume. The other roles were fairly well played.

James K. Hackett came forward again as a manager on Thursday evening last, when he produced at the Princess Theatre a farce called Jack's Little Surprise, with Arthur Byron featured in the leading role. The pretty little theatre was filled with an audience that included many players and quite a sprinkling of the New Yorkers who never miss a first-night on Broadway.

Jack's Little Surprise was written by Louis Eagan, hitherto unknown to fame, but who will very likely be heard from again. It cannot be said that Mr. Eagan has displayed any great originality in this offering, but he has handled his situations and complications in a very clever way, so that some of them seem almost new. His dialogue is remarkably natural and free from stilted expressions and "book language." The lines allotted to the leading character are especially good, and they were spoken by Mr. Byron in a glib, easy fashion that would have done credit to John Drew in his very best Daly days.

The story deals with several Americans who are on a visit to Cairo. Jack Van Allen and his bride are on their honeymoon, accompanied by the bride's father, who has just married a girl about the age of his daughter. Van Allen's wife's young brother is also a member of the party, and, being a susceptible youth, falls desperately in love with Fiametta, a member of the Pasha's harem, whom he rescues from some Turks who were maltreating her. Complications in which Jack and the old man become involved spring up. They culminate at the end of the first act by the hiding of the Egyptian girl in a large trunk in which Jack had intended to pack a lot of Turkish rugs and things with which to give his wife a little surprise when they reached New York. The surprise comes when the trunk is opened, and the Egyptian girl steps forth as fresh and blooming as ever, in spite of her long imprisonment in the hold of the steamer. The improbability of this may be overlooked on account of the humorous possibilities in the idea. The rest is a series of games of hide-and-seek, with many amusing bits of business, in which the wives take an active part. Matters are finally cleared up by the arrival of the Pasha's guards, who take charge of Fiametta, after it has been clearly shown that neither Jack nor his father-in-law have had anything to do with her importation.

Mr. Byron proved by his work in this piece that he must be classed as one of the best light comedians of the day. His easy, buoyant manner, his splendidly sharp, incisive delivery, and the superb way in which he carried the burden of the funmaking were positively delightful. His enthusiasm never flagged, and he worked with an earnestness that is worthy of the highest praise. Charlotte Walker had few opportunities, as her part of the young wife is rather colorless, but she did what she had to do very well. Carolyn Elberts carried off the honors among the women as Mrs. Peabody, a jealous wife. She had a "cute" way of delivering her lines that quite caught the fancy of the audience. Katherine Keyes as the amorous Egyptian was excellent, and helped materially in arousing the risibilities of the spectators. E. A. Eberle gave a delightfully humorous portrayal of the old man. Grace Barber as Mrs. Merrivale and Augusta Gardner as a pert maid were quite satisfactory. Mortimer Weldon as the youth who causes all the trouble, and Maurice Wilkinson as a mutual friend who becomes entangled in trying to smooth matters, were admirable. The others were quite equal to the parts assigned to them.

The production was by no means elaborate, and the scenery in the second act suggested anything but a room in the home of a New York millionaire. However, the acting was good and the audience enjoyed a very happy evening, thanks to the enterprise of Mr. Hackett.

Fourteenth Street—Girls Will Be Girls

Musical comedy in three acts, by R. Melville Baker and Joseph Hart. Produced Aug. 27.

Professor Ebenezer Hezekiah Dodge	Al. Leech
Abner Sankey	Art Brock
Sheriff Ketchem	Hubert Corthell
Nathan Hanley	Winfred Young
Tom Sparrow	John McVeigh
Marvin Brown	Harry Davies
Henry Sniffens	Oscar Watson
Police Officer Chase	Harry Wilson
Police Officer Holdhim	Ed Schultz
Ned Raymond	Ed Mora
Madeline Scribner	Lillian Bayer
Martha Young	Mary Karr
Lonely Sprouts	Roma Snyder
Esther Sprouts	Gladys Claire
Brussell Sprouts	Christine Cook

Girls Will Be Girls, a musical comedy in three acts, by R. Melville Baker and Joseph Hart, was produced by William A. Brady at the Fourteenth Street Theatre last Saturday evening. The theatre had been redecorated, and with a large, intelligent first-night audience presented a gala appearance. The play, written for Al. Leech and "The Three Rose Buds," Roma Snyder, Gladys Claire, and Christine Cook, suits them perfectly, and is exactly as programmed, "just nonsense, that's all, in three acts." The music, the catchy lines, and the vivacious girls of the company caught the fancy of the audience to such an extent that Manager Brady was obliged to appear during the first act and quiet the gallery by saying the company was trying to give a good first-night performance without offensive encores. The first act represents the playground of Dodge Academy, of which Professor Ebenezer Hezekiah Dodge (Al. Leech) is principal. There has been a cock fight in the village, and the professor, who, like Lemuel Jucklin, Stuart Robson's old part in The Jucklins, has a great fondness for cock fighting, and who is also running for Assembly, is, like every one else, in mortal terror of the Sheriff (Hubert Corthell). Much mirth is provoked by the concealing of a fighting cock under his coat tails, in the mail box and in the piano, and the realistic cock fight at the close of the second act, which is a school-room scene, with nothing especially new. The last act shows a Japanese fête given by the boys and girls of the school. Al. Leech's comedy is smooth, natural and unexaggerated. The Three Rose Buds captured the house. Lillian Bayer as Madeline Scribner, teacher of society, was graceful and clever. Her songs, "Etiquette" and "My Brown-Eyed Daisy," were prettily sung. She presented a very chic appearance. Other songs that "took" were "That Little Girl Is You," sung by Winfred Young, and "Gee! Wouldn't That Be Great," by Al. Leech in a quiet, finished style. Hubert Corthell, John McVeigh, and Mary Karr as Martha Young, the governess, were up to the mark in their respective roles. Of course, the stage was filled at times with "boys" and "girls" who simply added to the color, diversity and movement of the scenes.

Metropolis—A Fight for Love.

Comedy drama in four acts, by Hal Reid. Produced Aug. 22, 1904.

Robert Fitzsimmons	Robert Fitzsimmons
Horace Sheppard	Frederick Backus
James Ellington	O. B. Collins
Mike Tobin	Frederick Watson
Patrick Henry Jones	Daniel Sullivan
S. B. Craney	Edward White
Madge Gray	Emily Dodd
Jane Ellington	Maude Westbrook
Vivian Ellington	Julia May Gifford

Robert Fitzsimmons and company appeared at the Metropolis Theatre last week in a successful production of Hal Reid's new play, A Fight for Love. The new piece is fairly well constructed and affords many opportunities for dramatic climaxes. The hero, impersonated by "Bob," is kept busy thwarting the schemes of a polished villain and rescuing the heroine, Vivian Ellington, from his clutches. In the first act he meets her at a critical moment. Horace Sheppard has induced her to take a carriage ride in his company, contriving that her horse shall lose its shoe. This accident delays their return home, and Sheppard is in hopes that they will be compelled to spend the night at the lonely spot where they have been stranded. Fitz appears at this juncture, learns the facts and promptly displays his skill as a horseshoer, thus enabling the heroine to escape the compromising adventure that threatened her. They meet again in a New York gymnasium, where "Bob" does a great bag-punching act, and also knocks out a villian who attempts to throw vitriol at Miss Ellington. Bob is invited to her house on a visit, and while there discovers and balks a plot to rob her father's safe. The money is recovered, and to the amount of $10,000 is wagered on a prize fighter whose victory is expected to repair the broken fortunes of Miss Ellington's father Just before the fight takes place, however, their champion is found drugged and helpless. Fitz takes his place and wins a smashing victory. His hitherto unspoken love for Miss Ellington is now boldly avowed, meets with a fitting response, and all ends happily.

The company, though a small one, did fairly good work. Frederick Watson as Mike Tobin, an understudy for the chief villain, was excellent. Emily Dodd, as Madge Gray, also made a strong impression, especially in Act II. In the small part of Jane Ellington, Maude Westbrook did well. Frederick Backus, as Horace Sheppard, did his best to portray a villain. O. B. Collier was conventional as the rich banker, James Ellington. The Patrick Henry Jones of Daniel Sullivan was given with some traces of natural humor. The character of Miss Ellington, the adventurous heroine, fitted Julia May Gifford well. All she had to do was to look pretty and wear some smart costumes, and this she did to everybody's satisfaction.

Fitzsimmons read his lines in a matter of fact manner that showed signs of careful coaching. Of course, he was the centre of interest and carried the play nobly on his broad shoulders. This week, the Russell Brothers in The Female Detectives, a review of which will appear in THE MIRROR next week.

Dealers in White Women, a melodrama in four acts, by Martin Hurley, was produced at the New Star Theatre last Monday evening. In the home of Matthew Dean, a banker, who has two daughters, Hilda Murivale, in love with Barney Branton, king of cracksmen, and Elsie, a cripple, the household is aroused by the sound of burglars. Dr. Salsya, a Hindoo, who has a mad passion for Hilda, and Karina La Strange, "a woman without a heart," contrive to fasten the guilt upon Barney Branton in order to get him out of the way. He is put through "the third degree" by Detective Kane O'Hara, from whose office he escapes in order to protect Hilda, whom he learns is in danger of becoming a victim of Dr. Salsya, "a dealer in white women." The picture of the girl captives in a cell, where they are sold to men for a stipulated sum; an opium joint in Chinatown, where Hilda is taken, and the opium den of the doctor, where, though entrapped, Hilda is rescued by Branton, are all said to reveal the mysteries of the "cadet system." Vice in all its hideousness is shown in contrast to triumphant virtue. The play pleased the audience. The clever work of Laurence Underwood, Harry Fields, John Fenton, Ed Walters, Lawrence Merton, Clara Knott, Morgia Lytton, and Beatrice Loeb deserves especial commendation. This week, Only a Shop Girl.

Fifty-eighth Street—The Fatal Wedding.

The perennially successful melodrama, The Fatal Wedding, began another season at this house last week, and again attracted big audiences. The cast contained many of the players who were in it when the play was first produced several seasons ago. Julia Ralph as the adventuress and Nestor Lennon as the suffering husband were particularly good, and Cora Quinten and Zena Keife divided honors by appearing alternately in the trying role of the Little Mother. Gertrude Haynes and her Choir Celestial are retained as the big feature of the production, and there is scarcely a doubt that it is this attraction that has made The Fatal Wedding so immensely popular. Others in the cast were Berton Churchill, F. Montgomery, Dick Quilter, Howard Kersey, Charles Western, Vesle Farrel, May Thurston, Master Willie, J. C. Price, P. H. West, James Curtin, and Mattie Franks.

William Bramwell starts his starring tour here this week in Captain Barrington.

Grand—In Dahomey.

The Grand Opera House was reopened for the season on Saturday evening last, with Williams and Walker in the musical farce, In Dahomey. It is many months since these clever colored comedians have been seen here, and the story of their success in England lent an added interest to their opening, which was very largely attended. In Dahomey is the same bright, lively entertainment that has pleased the public many times before, and the addition of several new songs made it merrier than ever. Bert Williams' new ditty, "I May Be Crazy, but I Ain't No Fool," took the audience by storm, and he had to respond to eight or nine encores. George Walker's elegant wardrobe and his excellent dancing caused much favorable comment. The supporting company sang, danced and carried on with such vim that the applause was almost continuous. The engagement is for two weeks. The theatre has undergone extensive alterations since last season.

West End—A Son of Rest.

Nat M. Wills and his clever company opened for the season at the West End Theatre last night (Monday), and were greeted by a large and happy audience gathered again to enjoy the sprightly and amusing vehicle of this comedian. The company includes Master Willie Tilden, Harry A. Burgess, Fred Whitfield, Charles Udell, Edward Hayes, Frank Dearduff, Claude Barnes, Sylvia Storr, Aline Colin, Mona Wynne, Madge Melbourne, Maude Elliott, Margaret Miles, Beatrice Flint, Gussie Tilden, Margaret Witt, Georgie Snyder, and May Harrison in the speaking parts, and A Son of Rest goes as well as ever it did, if not better than ever, and this is all that need be said. A full week's business seems to be assured.

Academy—Checkers.

Henry M. Blossom's play, Checkers, which won great approval in New York during the past two seasons, was presented at the Academy of Music last Monday night before a large and a very enthusiastic audience. There have been a number of changes made in the play and the mounting thereof, making it more of a spectacular melodrama than formerly, but the cast remains much the same as in the original production. Thomas W. Ross continues to play the title-role with capital spirit and energy.

THE MATINEE GIRL

It is good to meet those who venerate their profession. True, these are trying times in things theatrical, trying enough to make many cry out, as did romping Josie Hall in a moment of bitter impatience, "I'm sore on the business." But still it gives us an inspiring little thrill to chat with Dorothy Donnelly, for instance, that grave little girl who says: "I was brought up to revere the theatre. When any matter of pleasure or of household affairs came up that conflicted with the theatre, it was always the theatre that won." It is pleasant to contemplate the sort of stage struck persons who, like Eva Davenport, say, after a score of years in stage service and with infectious enthusiasm, "It's the greatest profession in the world," or, like Clara Morris, who has drunk the lees with the sweets of the cup, "The drama has had the richest wealth of time and toil and mind of all ages poured into it to bear interest forever."

The actor's profession has at least one lamblike quality. The lamb loved Mary because Mary loved the lamb, you remember, and if you love the stage sanely but genuinely, and work to prove your affection, it will reciprocate by showering its benefits upon those who worthily love it.

Georgie Drew Mendum, who, as I have before said in this column, is the most thoughtful and studious of all the Drew-Barrymore-Baker stage congestion, is also the most amiable. Questioned about her placidity one day at a maddening rehearsal, Georgie answered, with a glance at the stage-manager, then on the edge of a convulsion:

"My ancestors signed the Declaration of Independence, or, if they didn't, they should have. I remember the rights of others. No one has a right to inflict his moods on any one else."

Edwin Forrest's advice, quoted by Francis Wilson, is well worth consideration by the anti-study cult of actors, those who talk a great deal about the divine spark and let it go out through lack of persistent fanning by study of the principles and collateral branches of their art:

"Actors should learn singing to give grace to the voice, fencing to give grace to the hand, and dancing to give grace to the body."

In and about Bay Ridge they are whispering that Lillian Russell—a manager of one of the "greatest shows on earth" advertises that he "used to travel with Lil Russell"—says she does not intend to get any older.

It is a laudable purpose, and every one who knows—really knows—Lillian Russell, for those who envy and decry don't know her, will wish for her its happy fulfillment. It is nit as visionary as it sounds, this determination to never grow older. Ten years I have known to brush a person lightly as by a dove's wing. Fifteen years we have seen flit by with reminders no more alarming than two or three graying hairs. Twenty years! It would stretch credulity to cracking point, perhaps, to imagine that the passage of twenty years left no trace, yet we have all seen men on the downward slope from sixty who were to the casual eye mere youths of forty.

Bernhardt and Patti are proof of the tenderness of fleeting years. Pauline Hall and Sadie Martinot, in Miss Russell's companionship, show how radiantly attractive a woman may be when the thirties have become a memory.

It is accepted grief, not years, that makes a man or woman old. The man who worries while he works, the woman who frets her days away, grow old. Poise, the happy heart, the hard working, but not worrying, mind, are the secrets of lasting youth, and thanks be they are all of home manufacture, independent of environment, of the wind or wave of circumstance, things quite apart.

A fortnight ago an actor friend introduced his dog to me. She was a fine, nervous, intelligent fox terrier, one of those intense live wire canines a half hour with whom gives one nervous prostration.

"What do you think of 'Jenny?'" the actor asked, with a fine show of family pride.

"She isn't soothing, but she seems to be conscientious," I returned, and the actor friend and I went our several ways.

This morning I met him again, and his rubicund visage was changed. He was a veritable Knight of the Rueful Countenance.

"Have you married and regretted since last we met?" I asked His Saturnineness.

"Thank you, no! I don't need a wife to tattle and make trouble in the family. I'm well provided with a woemonger," he snapped.

"How's 'Jenny?'" I inquired by way of placating.

"I haven't spoken to her for three days," he roared. "That dog is"—he stopped, amazed at the inadequacy of English, and he doesn't know dago—"female," he completed in triumph.

"She's an ingrate. She can't keep anything to herself. She's hysterical. She snaps at the hand that feeds her. She's a woman."

By gloomy degrees the sad story was unfolded. The actor has a failing. Three days before the Failing had "bested" him. He climbed the stairs to his flat, feeling as though one foot was on an escalator going up, the other on an elevator going down. Still in this uncertainty, and talking to himself in Volapuk, he let himself into the flat. A spotted, white creature, whom he playfully and with many interruptions designated as "Jerusalem's Golden Calf," surveyed him for a moment, then scudded past him and upstairs as swiftly as a sail boat before a high wind. The rest the actor learned in the morning.

"Jenny" had reported him to his two maiden sisters, who lived in the flat above, and the maiden sisters had reported back next day.

And that is the reason a popular leading man is trying to sell his dog.

Don't be discouraged if you have a good part in a bad play. Virginia Harned told me that a cuticle fitting part in a "failure" brought her to the attention of prominent managers, and gave her her upward start. A young friend of mine who went out last season with a failure that lived just five weeks did excellent work as a comedienne in the alleged play. Through the man who told the woman who told the man who told the manager of her "hit," she signed for a second woman's part in an undoubted success at double her former salary.

It's an ill play that blows no actor good.

THE MATINEE GIRL.

BRAMWELL A TRIPLE STAR.

William Bramwell began his starring season in Captain Barrington yesterday (Monday) afternoon at the Fifty-eighth Street Theatre. He was cast, of course, for the dual role of Barrington and Lieutenant Fielding, but in the performance he was compelled to assume still another role, and thus he accomplished the unusual, if not unprecedented, feat of starring in three roles. The cause of the novel circumstance was that the actor cast for General Washington, one of the most important roles in the play, was at the last moment unable to appear, and Mr. Bramwell, being thoroughly familiar with the lines, volunteered to go on in the part in order that the performance might be given. Victor Mapes, the author of the play, found that by changing only two or three lines it would be possible for the star to play the three roles. So successful was the experiment that Mr. Bramwell will probably continue to play Washington as well as Barrington and Fielding.

THE SEASON AT THE MANHATTAN.

Harrison Grey Fiske, manager of the Manhattan Theatre, announced last week that the season of that playhouse would begin on Wednesday evening, Sept. 14, with Mrs. Fiske and the Manhattan company in Becky Sharp. Among the principals in the cast will be John Mason, George Arliss, Stanley Rignold, R. V. Ferguson, W. B. Mack, Frank J., McIntyre Henry J. Hadfield, W. L. Branscombe, Roydon Erlynne, Ludwig Lerderer, Otto Meyer, Edwin Brewster, Laura McGilvray, Kate Fletcher, Cecilia Radclyffe, Emily Stevens, Lucy Spencer, Mary Maddern, Ethel Howard, and Frances Welstead. In addition to the plays already announced, Mr. Fiske has accepted for production by Mrs. Fiske and the Manhattan company a play by Rupert Hughes, dealing with New York society.

LAMBS LAY CORNERSTONE.

The cornerstone of the new fold of the Lambs, at Nos. 128 and 130 West Forty-fourth street, was laid last Wednesday, with appropriate ceremonies. Clay M. Greene presided, and W. A. Stadelman, chairman of the Building Committee, directed the laying of the stone. Imbedded in the stone was a box in which were placed newspapers of the day, theatre programmes and cards of many members of the club. Refreshments were served after the ceremonies and informal speeches were made by Thomas B. Clarke, De Wolfe Hopper and Wilton Lackaye. Clarence Harvey read an original poem composed for the occasion.

PLAYERS BACK FROM ABROAD.

Anna Held, accompanied by her husband, Florenz Ziegfeld, arrived from Europe on the Deutschland last Thursday. A number of the principals of the Weber Music Hall Company went down the bay in a tug to welcome the comedienne. Other theatrical people on board the liner were Julius Steger, Lulu Glaser and Frank McKee. Mr. Steger was asked to take part in the concert given during the voyage and he consented to appear provided half the receipts should go to the Actors' Fund. The Captain refused to break the precedent in the matter and none of the professional people aboard appeared at the concert.

NEW CHICAGO THEATRE.

Applications were filed with the Building Department in Chicago last Saturday for a permit to build a new playhouse at 71, 73 and 75 Monroe Street, to be called the Majestic Theatre. The plans call for a twenty-story office building, with a frontage of eighty-two feet and a depth of sixty feet, and a theatre building in the rear with dimensions of one hundred and thirty-two by eighty-two feet.

IMPORTANT INTERESTS JOINED.

GOSSIP OF THE TOWN.

Above is a likeness of George Bloomquest, who has been playing for several years with James Neill's various attractions. He closed with Mr. Neill in San Francisco, Aug. 27, and will open at the Columbia Theatre, Portland, next week as light comedian of the stock company. Mr. R. G. Welch is to manage there.

A dramatic entertainment was given last Thursday night at the Larchmont Yacht Club, under the management of Charles A. Stevenson. Rosetti's poem, A Last Confession, was presented in dramatic form by Mr. Stevenson and Hugo Toland. Manuel Klein, with an orchestra of thirty pieces, supplied the musical programme. Others who appeared in the performance were May Duryea, W. H. Mortimer, Helena Fredericks, and James H. Cullen.

The Fall term of the Chicago Conservatory of Music and Dramatic Art will open Sept. 1. It is reported by the management that never in the history of this old-established school has it ever enjoyed a degree of prosperity equal to that which is now being bestowed upon it. More new pupils have already been enrolled for entrance upon this September term than were ever listed for a like term in any one year of its existence.

The tour will include a six weeks' stay in Boston, as well as extended engagements in Philadelphia, Baltimore, Washington and Chicago. Later in the season the production will again be seen in New York.

In addition to The Vital Issue, a new play by George Middleton, Amelia Bingham has in consideration the manuscript of a new play which she received last week from Olga Nethersole. The play was submitted to Miss Nethersole for reading, and she cabled Miss Bingham at once advising her to secure the American rights.

The baseball team composed of members of the Checkers company issues a challenge to any company appearing in New York to play a game of ball, the team to be composed of members of the company only, and the proceeds of the game to go to the Actors' Fund. W. T. Clark, manager of the Checkers Club, Academy of Music, will arrange any match.

Arrangements were completed last week for an early production of The Missourians, by Wade Mountfortt and Nain Grute, which had its initial presentation by the Cook Opera House Stock company in Rochester last July, under the title of Out Thar. Norton, the St. Louis correspondent of THE MIRROR and secretary of the North American Investment Company, is one of the proprietors of this curious ethnological display.

Harry Harwood returned from Europe last Sunday after a three months' vacation passed there.

DAVID BELASCO'S ANNOUNCEMENT.

A striking announcement is made by David Belasco in another part of this week's MIRROR. It shows, first of all, that Mr. Belasco is still on the fighting line against the Theatrical Syndicate, and that he will brook no interference with his business.

It is said that reports have been circulated stating that Mrs. Carter and Miss Bates were anything but friendly to each other, when there is the best of feeling between them; that each is the other's greatest admirer, and that both stand hand in hand behind Belasco in fullest sympathy with his courageous stand. Mr. Belasco states that he would consider such reports as altogether unworthy his attention were it not that more serious things have come to light showing, as he says, the Syndicate's determination to injure the professional standing of both Mrs. Carter and Miss Bates.

"It is a fact," declared Mr. Belasco yesterday, "that certain members of the Theatrical Trust have instructed their managers and advance agents to do everything in their power to prejudice the minds of newspaper men and of theatrical managers against Mrs. Carter and Miss Bates, and they have strict orders to get their work in in advance. For instance, when Mrs. Carter was playing on the Pacific Coast there were several Syndicate attractions playing just ahead of her. In at least a half-dozen instances she and her play, Du Barry, were severely criticised by some local critic before she reached the town. This was such an extraordinary occurrence, and so utterly new in her experience, that Mrs. Carter failed to understand it. The matter was reported to me in New York, and I instituted means to fathom the mystery. I then found out that the Syndicate's managers and advance agents, acting under orders, were responsible for it all.

"The most flagrant offense was committed in Seattle. There, on the Sunday before Mrs. Carter's Wednesday appearance, one of the local papers printed a vicious article against her work and her play. Investigation proved that the 'critic' who wrote that article had never seen Mrs. Carter or Du Barry, and—which was of vastly more significance—that this critic was employed in the Western office of the Syndicate. Mrs. Carter met him later and called him to account. He admitted the whole charge, apologized humbly, declaring that he had written that article under orders, but adding that later he would 'square' himself. Consequently, the morning after her first appearance in Seattle there appeared over the same signature another article which was so laudatory, so directly the opposite of what had appeared the Sunday before in the same paper, that the managing editor called on the critic for an explanation.

"This, however, was only one of many similar instances, but it was enough. It gave me a new, if unpleasant, proof of the underhand methods which the Syndicate is pleased to pursue. As, however, I prefer to follow my established policy and do all my fighting in the open, I am again using the valuable columns of THE MIRROR to make a necessary declaration to all theatrical managers and newspaper men throughout the country. I simply ask them to regard as authoritative and true hereafter only such news of my players and enterprises as may be issued officially by my accredited agents or from my general offices at the Belasco Theatre. As for the rest of it, my statement explains itself; and I am confident that, now that the theatrical managers and newspaper men know the truth, they will resent anew the peculiar methods which the Theatrical Trust never fails to use in opposing its adversaries."

AMATEUR NOTES.

The Granger's Daughter, an opera in three acts, written and composed by R. P. Chase, of Belfast, Me., was produced in the Belfast Opera House Aug. 16-18 by amateurs. The scene of the opera is Lincolnville, Me., and its object seems to be to glorify Maine in song and dance. It is full of bright, original music, and credit is due F. J. Rigby, the musical director. The various dance numbers were tastefully arranged. Those in the cast were Frank W. Twombly, E. S. Pitcher, R. P. Chase, Walter J. Clifford, B. L. Davis, E. F. White, J. F. Daily, Mrs. E. P. Frost, and Mrs. E. S. Pitcher.

The people of Colorado Springs on Aug. 8-10 witnessed Thomas P. Getz's three-act musical comedy, Toodles in Posterland, with music by Miss P. E. Sturges, of Omaha. The performances were given for the benefit of Elk Lodge 309. The amateurs acquitted themselves finely and Otto Jeancon as the King of Spotless Town was specially commended.

Mrs. Erving Winslow's pupils appeared at Sharon, Mass., on Aug. 18, in Fanchon the Cricket. The performance was in all respects successful.

Clyde Fitch's play, The Climbers, is this week's attraction, with a cast that includes Eleanor Barry and George Soule Spencer (specially engaged), Marion Berg, Wallace Erskine, Verner Clarges and others. Sherwood and company in special production of a new sketch called Mona.

Paradise Gardens.

This is the final week of the roof season, and the regular indoor vaudeville will be inaugurated at the Victoria on Labor Day. Walz, and Josephine Sabel and Eleanor Falk, in Parsifalia.

LAST WEEK'S BILLS.

KEITH'S UNION SQUARE.—Henry Lee headed the bill in his impersonations. He introduced Roosevelt, Parker and Hill in addition to other celebrities. As far as vocal mimicry is concerned, Mr. Lee did not give a very clear idea of the characteristics of the politicians, though the make-ups were excellent. George Evans was by all odds the most pleasing feature of the programme. His monologue was one long laugh and his timely jokes were highly appreciated. His remarkable voice was heard to great advantage in "The Songs My Mammy Sang." The Carter De Haven Sextette, made up of Mr. De Haven, Agnes and Mabel Lyon, Rose De Haven, Carrie Bowman, and Rose Malvene, presented a skit called An Easy Angel, written by Morris S. Silver, with music by Rose De Haven. The sketch is a melange of songs, dances and dialogue, and serves to while away a half-hour quite entertainingly. The girls are prettily and expensively costumed, and all of them are good dancers. The only weak spot in the act is where Mr. De Haven and Mabel Lyon do an imitation of Charles J. Ross and Lillian Russell. When this is remedied the turn will be all right and should find favor in any part of the country. The song, "Honey, I'm Waitin'," by Ted Barron, was encored several times. Mlle. Albertine Melich made her American debut, exhibiting with much success a fine collection of tropical birds that went through many difficult tricks. Carlin and Otto introduced a lot of new material into their Dutch act and most of it was very amusing. They are among the cleverest of our Dutch entertainers and always seem to be anxious to improve their specialty. Gallagher and Hild scored with an eccentric act called The Misfit Huntsman and the Scarecrow. Lucia and Vieta, in a clever exhibition on the slack wire; John Waller and Alice Magill, the Drummer Quartette, Van Leer and Duke, Willie and Edith Hart, and the biograph also pleased.

TONY PASTOR'S.—Miss Norton and Paul Nicholson headed the bill in a new sketch put together by the performers themselves, called The Lady and the Pugilist. It is a light and frothy affair, just suited to the tastes of the average vaudeville audience, and gives ample opportunity to both players for the introduction of the specialties in which they are seen at their best. The scene is laid in a dressmaking parlor in which the pugilist has an interest. His partner runs away, leaving him in charge of the shop, and he is compelled, much against his will, to meet one of the smart customers of the concern, who comes in to try on a new dress. Miss Norton is the customer, and when she removed her walking suit in order to try on the new gown there were many favorable comments by the women on her good taste in the mysterious garments revealed. The business in the trying-on scene was very amusing. A little conversation was followed by a song by Miss Norton and some excellent imitations by Mr. Nicholson, winding up with a neat song and dance. Mr. Nicholson's imitation of Corbett was simply perfect in intonation, accent and gesture, and the one of De Wolf Hopper reciting "Casey" was almost as good. Miss Norton has certainly killed two birds with one stone by securing a good-looking husband and a clever partner at the same time, and by Mr. Nicholson's reappearance in vaudeville, in which he made his first success on the stage, comic opera suffers a distinct loss, while vaudeville enjoys a corresponding gain. Cook and Sylvia were second in the billing, and Mr. Cook justified their position by an exhibition of difficult dancing that would be hard to beat. Carson and Willard kept things going at a lively pace with their Dutch act, in which the King's English is handled without gloves. Their dancing is a big feature. The Watermelon Trust was billed as a special feature and closed the programme with an exhibition that included almost everything that can be done to amuse the public. It is a very attractive and spirited act, and the fun is fast and furious from beginning to end. Morton and Elliott deserve praise for the quick way in which they work. Their paper-tearing finish was rewarded with plenty of applause. Martini and Max Millian were among the big hits, with their exposure of the various tricks performed by magicians. There are many good laughs in the act which are brought out by the clever work of both men. Lillian Tyce and Irene Jermon, who are pets with the Pastorites, scored again in their very neat and elegantly costumed specialty. Miss Tyce's Irish songs brought down the house, and Miss Jermon won her full share of the honors. Le Smyth and Abacco did a good barrel-jumping act. Miles and Nitram, Siddons Brothers, the Pryors, Gourdier Sisters, and the vitagraph were also present.

PROCTOR'S TWENTY-THIRD STREET.—The Mansfield-Wilbur company in The Shadow, by Edward McWade and Randolph C. Lewis, made such a fine impression the week before last that they were retained for a second week. Their success was continued and the strong climax brought down the house at every performance. The Exposition Four pleased in their musical specialty with comedy trimmings. Dillon Brothers sang their newest songs, including one called "Hurrah for a Holiday," that is likely to be popular. Bertie Fowler's stories and imitations went very well, but she ought to go at her audience more vigorously. Wolf and Milton, comiques; Nate Leipzig, Falardo, the Edgertons, Mr. and Mrs. Jack Hayman in a new sketch called The New Stenographer, Bert Wiggins, Dumont Sisters, and the kalatechnoscope were also in the bill.

PROCTOR'S 125TH STREET.—Rival Candidates was cleverly presented by the stock company. Good work was done by George Spencer, William Cullington, H. Dudley Hawley, George Bryant, William Hawley, Albert Roberts, Emma Campbell, Alice Braham, Ethel Earle, and Loretta Healy. Marion Kendall and Amy Thompson, Charles R. Hargreaves, Gregory and Lind, and the kalatechnoscope made up a good olio.

PROCTOR'S FIFTH AVENUE.—The New Magdalen was given a most effective presentation last week, with W. S. Hart and Jessie Izett in the leading roles. A good olio included Dillon Brothers, Bertie Fowler, Fialkowski, Walter Brown and the Ellis Sisters in a new singing and dancing act that took well; Fisher and Johnson, Gillette Sisters, the kalatechnoscope, and Alexis and Schall.

PARADISE GARDENS.—Agnes Mahr, the clever little eccentric dancer, made her reappearance after a long absence and was warmly greeted. Her specialty met with instant favor and she was repeatedly recalled. The rest of the bill was the same as usual, and the various entertainers continued to please.

MADISON SQUARE ROOF-GARDEN.—Paris by Night closed a successful Summer run on Saturday evening last. Weber and Rush are to be congratulated on having given New Yorkers such a pleasing, breezy entertainment.

The Burlesque Houses.

DEWEY.—The World Beaters Burlesquers played to packed houses and gave an excellent performance. One Night Out and Ping, Pang, Pong were the burlesques, replete with mirth, melody and spectacular effects. This week, Runaway Girls.

GOTHAM.—Weber's Parisian Widows crowded the house last week. This company is one of the best burlesque aggregations now touring. Down the Pike is the curtain-raiser, and the finale is A Day at the Barracks. Between the two skits a first-rate olio included Ben Welch, Snyder and Buckley, Nelson and Milledge, Arnold and Valmore, Rose Carlin, and Charles Falk. This week, Imperial Burlesquers.

LONDON.—The season opened auspiciously here on Aug. 20, with Manchester's Cracker Jacks, headed by Bob Van Osten, Belle Hathaway's monkeys, and the Wang Doodle Four. Big crowds attended all last week. This week's attraction is the Vanity Fair company.

MINER'S EIGHTH AVENUE.—The Imperial Burlesquers started the ball rolling here at this house on Aug. 22. Prominent in the company are Flossie Coy, Lillian and Rena Washburn, the Musical Bells, and George H. Diamond. This week Scribner's Morning Glories.

MINER'S BOWERY.—The season started with a boom on Aug. 20, with Rice and Barton's company, headed by the inimitable Charles Barton. The olio included Bert Baker, Mlle. Rae, Renzetta and La Rue, and Gilroy, Haynes and Montgomery. This week, Rentz-Santley Burlesquers.

PLANS FOR THE HIPPODROME.

Frederick W. Thompson, of Thompson & Dundy, who are building the new Hippodrome at Sixth avenue and Forty-third street, returned from Europe last week with a trunkful of contracts with European artists, who will appear at the opening early in January. Among other things bought by Mr. Thompson was the entire equipment of a big European circus, including trained horses and other animals. In outlining the entertainment to be given at the Hippodrome Mr. Thompson said that the opening would be a musical extravaganza employing over 400 people, to be followed by circus acts shown in two rings, and winding up with a war spectacle called Andersonville, in which 1,500 men and 200 horses will take part. Women ushers will show patrons to their seats, and the positions will be filled by women who have had experience in London theatres.

"BUSTER" HAS A BABY BROTHER.

Little "Buster" Keaton is wearing a half-glad, half-sad smile these days. Up to Thursday evening last he had been the apple of his father's eye, but from now on he will have to be content with less than half the attention he has been shown heretofore, for the stork paid a visit to his home on Thursday and left another little "Buster," who will be named Harry Stanley Keaton, after the manager of a theatre in Salem, Mass. Joe Keaton, the proud and happy father, rushed around the corner to THE MIRROR office early on Friday morning to announce the glad tidings of the successful debut of his new son. He has been kept busy ever since receiving the congratulations of his friends.

CONEY ISLAND RUMORS.

Rumors were afloat last week to the effect that several of the big amusement parks in Coney Island would be formed into one big trust. This is hardly likely to happen, though, as opposition seems to be the life of trade, as far as the beach resorts are concerned. Still another syndicate has been formed and has bought a plot 4,000 by 1,000 feet on Surf avenue, at a cost of $500,000, for the purpose of establishing another big park. If this scheme is carried through Coney Island will have no less than five immense amusement enterprises next Summer.

FAMOUS DOG DEAD.

The performing dog "Jack," that has been shown at about every fair in New England by his owner, Joseph A. Wilson, of Chester Depot, Vt., died recently in Boston. "Jack" was ten years in the profession, and had appeared in all the first-class vaudeville houses from Maine to Texas and for several years was the Mother Hubbard dog in Jack and the Beanstalk. Mr. Wilson, familiarly known as "Joe," has been employed this season as ticket-seller at Austin and Stone's Museum, Boston.

VAUDEVILLE IN LONDON.

MIRROR BUREAU,
TRAFALGAR HOUSE, GREEN STREET, LEICESTER SQUARE, W. C.,
LONDON, Aug. 20, 1904.

The first appearance in England, although well known in America, of the Ten-Ichi Troupe of Japanese illusionists has drawn an interesting audience to the Alhambra. I understand that they built their act in the States and created quite a favorable impression there. They introduce some novel tricks, the first half of them being performed by a charming little lady, who fascinated me more than the few illusions she effected. The hit of their performance was made with the mysterious fountain and thumb tricks. The effects were pretty and mystifying and the audience heartily appreciated the turn. Perzina's monkeys are an excellent turn, and besides being most amusing show how well trained these ancestors of ours can be. Their reception was instantaneous and prolonged. The Brothers Egbert are newcomers on the bill, though they had previously installed themselves as favorites at the Alhambra. In their burlesque on English-Dustmen they show a great amount of humor and an exceptional ability in their tumbling. Colonel Bordwerry is in his last week, and has scored an unusual success. His aim in the near future is for America, where he is sure to make a hit, and the report of it will be in the papers soon after. The five Whiteleys have a good melange of tumbling and slack-wire walking, proving a capital turn, while the Urban Bioscope is worthy of being featured and is well deserving of a visit to the Alhambra. All the Year Round is still an attraction, but I understand they are working on a new ballet.

The attraction at the Empire Theatre is Marguerite Cornille, who sings "The Little Brown Man of Japan," an American melody, with a great deal of meaning. She clings to her old favorite, "When Mr. Shakespeare Comes to Town," which goes down uncommonly well with the audience. Mlle. Cornille has a personality which is attractive and engaging. An exceptionally clever bicycle act is given by Paulton and Doley, whose names are apt to mislead one. They are Germans and a credit to the fatherland. They do whatever they like on the wheel, and considering that they have had some extraordinarily clever predecessors it says a lot for them. The tramp works on entirely American principles and has all the side-play down to perfection. H. Sloan as a burlesque juggler is good and is as much humorously bothered with cigar boxes as Sam Elton is with plates. A Continental turn of eccentric painters are Jean Prix and Miss Annie, introducing a humor in art entirely original. The mirrors of a tonsorial saloon are used as canvas, the soap suds, soft soap and combs comprising their material to paint with, but the effects are pretty. The four Merkel Sisters are still as smart as ever, working with vim, and are a credit to Sydney Hyman's bookings. T. Nelson Downs is still on the bill, though privately very enthusiastic over his new act, which he intends to produce at the Winter Garden, Berlin, shortly.

The Empire people are rehearsing a new ballet, which they intend to bear on Eton, and I can well imagine Mlle. Genee as an Eton College boy. High Jinks is still in favor. The popularity of this famous house is due to the courtesy of Mr. Hitchins, who has been connected there so many years.

One appreciates an independent variety bill, such as one is always sure to find at the London Pavilion, a house at which turns appear that are not apt to be seen elsewhere. Charles Serra is a clever equilibrist, performing on a high pedestal, lifting weights with his teeth, while balancing on one hand resting on a walking stick. He also draws himself up to a hand balance on a couple of billiard cues. Harry Carsdale is very amusing as a farm-yard mimic. He describes the incidents which lead up to the imitations with a great amount of adaption, making his turn doubly interesting. As specialty dancers, Les Auberts are well in the lead, and did not seem to be at all handicapped for want of space in their pirouettes. They work conscientiously and did not waste their time with any superfluous descriptions, and although the Continent seems stocked with a number of such turns, this one can be picked out for agility and grace. Horace White has made a feature in the mechanical arrangements of his dolls, his ventriloquial act seeming a natural episode and not an extravagant one as most of them are represented. I can recommend this turn as interesting and out of the ordinary. Herbert Shelley is an actor-vocalist with a pleasing voice and a talent worthy of recognition. His two songs are descriptive of national events, which catch the spirit and the sentiment of the audience. The Vernon Troupe are five xylonophists of no mean order, giving an accurate rendering of Wagner's "Tannhauser March" and a pleasing pot-pourri of popular airs to general satisfaction. Mlle. Duperret is a captivating Parisian chanteuse, and she sang her songs with such sweet feeling that she was an undoubted relief to the chanteuse of other climes. Her pronunciation in her English song was most bewitching. Another foreign turn is Mlle. Martha, who is really an excellent trapezist and an adept at the graceful descent on the single rope. The Three Laurels do some acrobatic twisting on a ping-pong table with its top removed, and leaving a sort of springed mattress from which they leap cleverly. The sliding roof is quite an innovation at this house and has set the example to various other halls.

"Phroso" is in town, just arrived from South America, where he has been the lucky winner of a $1,000 lottery, besides making a huge success in Buenos Ayres. He expects to open again in New York next January with his act changed for the better.

O. K. Sato has left for Hamburg prior to his opening at the Hansa Theatre.

Lizzie B. Raymond and Lola Jberri sail this week for South Africa on the Walmer Castle.

The Salambos are leaving for Australia from Africa, while Sandow and Kokin intend touring the dark continent.

Speaking of Australia, Maggie Moore has arrived in London from there, and expects very shortly to leave for America.

William Gould has gone to Paris. He sails for South Africa in September.

Frank McKee, Charles Buckley, and Hardeen, of handcuff fame, arrived a few days ago on the Deutschland.

Albert Le Fre, a well-known vaudeville artist on this side, has very ably taken up Sherman Wade's late part of the Frenchman in The Prince of Pilsen.

Reports are to hand that Howard Thurston intends coming over here about December. I well remember the success he made in New York. If he does come I am sure his act will astound theatregoers and be a big drawing card at whatever house he may appear.

I am glad to hear that George Fuller Golden has recuperated and has been seen enjoying the ozone at Brighton.

Monday, Aug. 15, was a gala night at the Palace, being Charles Morton's eighty-fifth birthday. Congratulations poured in and telegrams, flowers, fruit and jewelry were a few of the methods in which his well-wishers sent tokens. Mr. Morton left for the seaside this week for a well-earned rest.

The Palace has some interesting additions to its bill, commencing with the Jalvans, who entertain with some good juggling and illusions. They strike me as hailing from the States, and though they are dark their comedy was pleasantly light. Venie Clements proved a dainty comedienne and a good mimic. Her imitation of a child singing was extremely well done. La Petite Superbe does some excellent toe dancing and also dances on her hands, banging at a tambourine with her feet. She cannot be much more than ten years of age and has a great future. Les Lios Alfa Troupe of female gymnasts look daintily Parisienne, and are very clever on the trapeze. Earle and Earle are to be congratulated on their success. There are two big imporvements in their act since I saw them at the Alhambra, a new partner and neat attire. These, in addition to their clever banjo performance, won many encores. A fine tripel bar act is given by Mason and Bart. The make-up of one as Captain Kettle was very good. It is a pity that their humor is not entirely original. Holden's manikins are a revelation in doll handling, the pigmies looking exceptionally lifelike. This is the best act of its kind I have seen. Vesta Victoria seems to have caught on at the Palace, which shows that even the most select audiences can appreciate low comedy when it is well done. Miss Ella and her lions are still an attraction, but the act appears a little tame when attendants enter the cage to set chairs and such articles without fear. Williams and Brown, with Irish dialects and a German make-up, prove amusing, but unfortunately their material has seen better days. Tom Hearn, in his irony on physical culture, and May Gurney, a charming vocalist, add to an interesting programme.

Wednesday was the first anniversay of the Stoll Tour's newest and, in my opinion, prettiest theatre, the Shepherd's Bush Empire, and a strong bill was a happy indication of the event. Mr. Dobson seemed more than pleased, as he probably echoed the thoughts of those who knew that there will be many happy returns of the day. The bill was headed by W. C. Fields, who proved an immense attraction. He is funnier than ever in his comedy. Fields is to be congratulated upon having been a father since July 28, and to be appreciated that he gave his baby boy the chance of perhaps becoming President one day. His son was born in New York City, and already weighs eight and a half pounds. The addition to his family should give him an extra encouragement in his engagement for pantomime at the Princess' Theatre, Manchester, in the leading comedy part for the coming season. Peppo's monkeys seemed wonderfully bright, but inclined to be obstinate. An American, Juno Salmo, who has been in this country for over five years, combines expert trapeze work with an original idea of setting. Heeley and Meeley are most amusing as comedy acrobats, Meeley being an exceptionally smart tumbler, while Heeley as a "hayseed" is typically funny. Lily Langtry must feel indebted to the ample room alloted to her act. Her vivacity must feel a trifle cramped on a smaller stage, for she has enough of it to satisfy ten burlesque actresses. With it all she seems to please and captivate her audience. I was truly delighted with Rodolfo and Carola on the double trapeze. They were remarkably young and yet daring to a degree, without losing any of their childlike behavior, and have an undoubted pleasure in their work. They would do extremely well in New York, if only the Gerry Society would have no objections to their age. Minnie Palmer, known throughout both continents, is appearing in an incident entitled A Husband's Diary, in which she proves herself most entertaining. She is assisted by Sidney Harcourt. Miss Palmer surprised me with the youth she was effervescent with, and still reminded me of My Sweetheart when a boy.

Little Fred and his acrobatic dogs, who have toured the States, is making a big hit on the Stoll Tour.

I looked into the Hippodrome again and I more than recognized what a clever turn Morris Cronin and his four assistants are doing. The accuracy of their work in club swinging is really next to marvelous and they are making huge success nightly. Carl Hertz is still bewildering his audience in his illusion act. I have been informed that Salamonsky, with his fire horse, is the Eugene Mauder who appeared at the Hippodrome some months back, when he made such a big success. Using the name of Salamonsky, the renowned circus owner, misled me into believing that he was related to the latter. The Griffiths Brothers have joined the bill with their burlesque wrestling, and Paul Courtault, in a novelty jockey act, is also an interesting addition. Siberia is still nightly warmed by the audiences' appreciation and winds up as excitingly as ever with the plunging horses.

I had the pleasure of meeting Frederic W. Thompson, of Thompson and Dundy. I was astounded at the gigantic schemes which Mr. Thompson has in practical formation. He is a typical specimen of energized American enterprise, for since he arrived in Europe, July 23, he has covered the Continent. Mr. Thompson was born in Ironton, Ohio, thirty-one years ago, and that fruitful State for showmen can be well proud of this Napoleon of their craft.

A contemporary states that Mr. Moss has joined hands with Frank McKee in view of building a number of music halls in the United States to be run on British lines.

By-the-bye, I saw Oswald Stoll, Carl Hagenbeck, of Hamburg, and George Starr, manager of Barnum and Bailey's, very much in conference together at the Hotel Cecil, and this led me to believe that the vaudeville world would soon have some fresh schemes to ponder over. Louise Willis did not sail last week for America, but has been engaged to play the part of Mrs. Crocker in The Prince of Pilsen. Sophie Brandt is returning to America, I understand.

Nelson Downs opens Sept. 1 with his big new act at the Folies Bergére, Paris, and not at the Winter Garden in Berlin, as first intimated. Tom Browne, the whistler, is appearing there at the same time.

"Yours merrily," John R. Rogers, is in London, and seems to be enjoying himself.

Elfie Fay and her brother Hugh, it is reported, have come into $45,000 each.

Mudge and Morton are making a big success at the Tivoli, Dublin, where they top the bill.

JESSIE COUTHOUI.

The above cut is the second of a series presented in THE MIRROR of Jessie Couthoui's comedy monologue sketch entitled Eleven-Forty P.M. The scene shows the action of the sketch immediately previous to the discovery of the burglar, who is stealthily endeavoring to obtain possession of the key hanging on the screen. He is seen by Miss Couthoui as she turns to the looking-glass, while singing a "toast" to herself. Eleven-Forty P.M. is Miss Couthoui's most ambitious effort in vaudeville. The act is magnificently presented, the properties, draperies, etc., being of yellow damask and white satin. The portable properties cost $1,000.

REVONOC.

NOBLES HAS NEW PLAY.

Milton and Dolly Nobles will terminate their Western Summer season at Toledo this week and return to New York to begin rehearsals of The Days of '49, Mr. Nobles' new one-act comedy, which they will play exclusively during the season. In this new sketch they will be assisted by Mary Davenport and Allan Bennett. It will have its first performance at Keith's New Theatre, Philadelphia, on Sept. 19. Their time is booked in Keith houses up to the first week in December. Mr. Nobles has declined all offers for further bookings until after the production. The Days of '49 will be a complete scenic production. The set is being made and painted by George W. Dayton.

CAL WAGNER TO PLAY AGAIN.

"Happy Cal" Wagner, the old-time minstrel, who retired from the stage about fifteen years ago to enjoy his fortune, has decided to return to the footlights for the purpose of bidding a genuine farewell to the people whom he was wont to amuse in the old days. He has signed a contract with Quinlan and Wall's Minstrels, and is now rehearsing in Elmira for the opening, which will occur at the Waverly Opera House in that city Sept. 17.

VAUDEVILLE IN BROOKLYN.

The Orpheum Theatre opens its doors this week with the following bill: Enigmarelle, Billy B. Van and Rose Beaumont, John Ford and Mayme Gehrue, Collins and Hart, Fred. Hallen and Mollie Fuller, Geo. W. Day, Rauschelle, English Grand Opera Quartette and the Three Rossi Brothers.

At Watson's Theatre, Fiddle-Dee-Did will be the burlesque attraction, strengthened by a vaudeville olio, comprising The Watermelon Trust, Orville and Frank, Fields and Hanson, Patchen and Clifton, and The Franklyn Sisters.

Brighton Beach Music Hall is featuring a large bill composed of Helen Bertram, Wright Huntington and co., Pat Rooney and Marion Bent, Violet Dale, Melville and Stetson, Sinon and Paris, Tom Lewis and Sam J. Ryan, and Thomas Nast.

La Belle Rosario Guerrero is the feature at Morrison's Theatre, Rockaway. Others are Moore and Littlefield, Campbell and Caulfield, Browning Sisters and co., Holden and Florence, Ethel Robinson and Newell and Chinquilli.

Keeney's Fulton Street will open Sept. 5 with vaudeville.

GEORGE TERWILLIGER.

VAUDEVILLE JOTTINGS.

Charles Leonard Fletcher writes that his six weeks engagement at the Empire Palace, Johannesburg, South Africa, has proven a success, and that his new act, which he calls An Evening with Charles Dickens and Other Great Novelists, was very well received. He also reports that World and Kingston scored heavily, producing during their engagement two distinct acts. Miss Kingston created a positive furore with her splendid soprano voice, singing American songs. After his Cape Town engagement at the Tivoli, Mr. Fletcher returns to London, where he has consecutive bookings extended into 1907.

Kizzie B. Masters is visiting her people at Alton, Ill., and incidentally taking in the World's Fair. She will return early in September to begin work with her military comedienne, Romance of Red Cross.

Seymour and Dupree write THE MIRROR from Valencia, Spain, under date of August 12, that they are en route to Buenos Ayres.

The Lyceum Theatre, Detroit, opened for the season with the Al. G. Field Greater Minstrels, on Thursday, Aug. 18. The house was packed at each of the four performances. This theatre is the largest in the State of Michigan, having a seating capacity of 2200.

Lewis Jordan, of the Six Flying Jordans, now with the Forepaugh and Sells Brothers Circus, was recently driven from Vladivostok, Russia, where he was managing a circus. His wife was arrested as a spy in the Japanese interests, but managed to escape. Mr. Jordan had left Russia for the United States to secure talent for his co. He was later joined here by his family. They lost everything in Russia, as their effects were confiscated by the government. The Flying Jordans are preparing an entirely new act, and will be seen in the leading vaudeville theatres next winter.

Morton and Elliott play their last date in America week of Aug. 29, at Chase's, Washington. They will sail Sept. 6 on the "Kaiser Wilhelm II," and open Sept. 16 at Leipsig, Germany, for fifteen days. They will be at the Berlin Wintergarten for the month of October, and are booked over the Moss, Stoll and Thornton tours until 1907.

La Neva, the toe dancer, will open with a Broadway production in November, in which she will do her regular act she has been doing in vaudeville.

The Colby Family, musical entertainers, joined the Fenberg Stock co., opening at Bangor, Me., Aug. 22. The specialties with this company include The Colby Family, Marie McNeil, cornetist; Fred. D. Woodbury, in illustrated songs; Will J. Kennedy, singing and dancing comedian; Grace Vinton, singing and dancing soubrette.

Herrmann the Great is spending this week in Washington, D. C., where he is putting the few last finishing touches to his new act, preparatory to his opening at Chase's Theatre, Sept. 5. It is said that this new act will far surpass anything of the kind ever put on the stage by Hermann in the past. The new scene in which Herrmann is to present his act, has been entitled by him the Palace of Enchantment, and is the most magnificent setting ever used in any magical entertainment. Herrmann will, in the near future, be seen in New York for several weeks, and his appearance is being looked forward to with great interest.

M. B. Leavitt is said to be negotiating for a lease of Fischer's Theatre in San Francisco, with a view to putting on some of the musical comedies in which George W. Lederer is interested.

Frank Taft, a high diver, was seriously injured while doing his act at Olympic Park, near Newark, N. J., on Aug. 22. He landed on his back and suffered such a severe shock that he became paralyzed from the waist down.

In Binghamton, N. Y., recently, Lew Dockstader, in a humorous speech, presented Neil O'Brien with a handsome gold fob and gold cuff buttons, on behalf of the Binghamton Knights of Columbus, of which Mr. O'Brien is a member.

Edward Whitman, a scene constructor, employed at Pain's Fireworks Amphitheatre, Manhattan Beach, was killed by the explosion of a bomb on Tuesday last. The explosion caused a fire that threatened to destroy the entire eastern section of Coney Island, including the magnificent Manhattan and Oriental Hotels, but it was quickly extinguished with a loss of about $250.

Frank H. Gentry, one of the proprietors of Gentry Brothers Animal Shows, was held for trial last week on a charge of violating a section of the New York City Charter in attempting to give a circus in Flushing without a license. Mr. Gentry had procured a license to give a "common show," but the authorities claimed that his performance could not be classed under that heading. A nice point of law will be tested at the trial.

Pain's annual carnival of fire was held at Manhattan Beach on Thursday last, and as the weather was superb, the affair was a great success in every way. A number of novel features were introduced.

Atlantic City will have a duplicate of Luna Park next Summer if the plans proposed by Thompson and Dundy are carried out.

The Barrett Sisters, Ridie and Edna, closed a very successful Summer season of fifteen weeks at Richmond, Va., on Aug. 27. After a rest at Atlantic City they will open their Winter season at Grand Rapids, Mich., week of Sept. 5. They are booked solid for the entire season with McMahon's Minstrel Maids and Watermelon Girls, this being their second season with Mr. McMahon. They are featured as end men in the Minstrels and also in the Watermelon act.

Crimins and Gore continue to win golden opinions with their production of A Warm Match, on the park circuits.

Victor Moore and Emma Littlefield opened their season at The Park Theatre, Bayonne, N. J., on Aug. 22, as the headliners, and scored their usual hit. The act has many new features this season, and is booked solid to Feb. 27.

Harry R. Moore has closed with the Cash Carnival co., and has gone home to arrange for the season of 1905, for the Harry R. Moore Greatest One Ring Show On Earth.

Barry and Ella Gray have signed with John J. Murray to do their marionette act and play parts in the Murray and Mackey Repertoire co.

J. C. Nugent and Co. played the only return engagement of the season at Winona Beach, Bay City, Mich., recently and repeated their success.

Master Elliott, after a year's retirement to attend school, has resumed his vaudeville engagements. He is seven years of age, and does no "imitations" of other comedians, and uses no borrowed material, but does an original comedy monologue.

Almont and Dumont are having several new instruments made to be used in their act.

Carleton Macy and Maud Edna Hall, who have scored a decided success in A Timely Awakening, will remain in vaudeville the entire season, as the demand for their services will insure them bookings that are more than satisfactory. They are fortunately in possession of an act that is entirely out of the ordinary.

Gay, the handcuff expert, writes THE MIRROR to deny the rumor that he intends going to Europe to become a rival of Harry Houdini. Mr. Gray adds that he is doing very nicely in America, and has no desire to go abroad.

Radford and Winchester have booked a season of forty weeks with Hanlon's Superba.

Mason and Keeler have evidently hit the fancy of English audiences, as they are heading the bill at every house in which they appear.

John G. and Alice McDowell closed a ten weeks tour of the parks at the Casino, Toledo, on Aug. 21.

Harry Houdini, before he sailed for England last week, took the precaution of registering his wife's diamonds and other jewels at the Custom House. He has already paid duty on them and does not care to repeat the operation when he returns two years from now. During his visit here this Summer, Houdini invested in a lot of fine property, including a magnificent private residence on one of the best streets in the upper part of New York City, for which he paid a very large sum in spot cash.

Charles Merritt, of Merritt and Rozella, was taken suddenly ill while playing Robinson Park, Fort Wayne, Ind., week of Aug. 21, and has been confined to his bed in that city ever since. He hopes to resume work in a few weeks.

The many friends of Jule Delmar, the popular manager, will be glad to hear that his wife presented him with a bouncing baby girl on Aug. 26, at Jamestown, N. Y.

Marie Stuart, who has been appearing in vaudeville with Clayton White for the past four years, was granted an absolute divorce from her husband, Joseph M. Gaites, in the Chicago Court, on Aug. 4, by Judge Elbridge Hanecy.

Louise Henry is just finishing a nine weeks' engagement on the J. K. Burke circuit of parks, and is booked solid for the Winter season in the regular vaudeville houses.

Harry Thomson was quite at home at Hurtig and Seamon's Pier, Arverne, L. I., week of Aug. 22. His impersonations pleased the audiences mightily.

Heleam De Nouri has just closed with The Millinery Maids in vaudeville, and is now rehearsing for the regular season.

Lou Simonds, formerly tenor with the Lost River Quartette and Stirling Comedy Four, has joined hands with Helen Goodie, the clarinet soloist, and they are now doing an act called The Tourist and the Minstrel. At present they are on the Jake Wells Southern Circuit.

The Moulin Rouge in Paris has changed hands and is now under the management of Montcharmont and Melchisidec. All contracts have been canceled and only those made through Emil Hugo, of 22 Cite Trevise, Paris, will be carried out. American performers who may be booked at the Moulin Rouge should make a note of this fact.

Frank C. Bostock will make Baltimore the American home of his animal entertainment, in spite of the fact that he was burned out there a few years ago. The animals now at Dreamland will be shipped to Paris as soon as the Coney Island season is over.

Sully and Phelps have been visiting the interesting resorts in Southern California. They are presenting a copyrighted sketch called The Irish Orator.

Zelma Rawlston is still scoring in the production of Louisiana at Delmar Gardens, St. Louis.

Billy McClain has arrived in England from Australia, and is anxious to make arrangements with some English manager for the staging of one of his numerous colored comedies with music.

James R. Adams has injected a lot of new business into the Fire and Flames spectacle at Luna Park. In his capacity as stage-manager Mr. Adams has given the greatest satisfaction to Thompson and Dundy.

Hayman and Franklin have issued a very unique postal card, designed by Herbert Lloyd, in which they are shown standing at the corner of Liberty Street and Broadway, signifying that they are "at liberty."

McDermott and Diamond Brothers' Minstrels will open on Sept. 17, at Irwin, Pa., and will travel through the Middle West to California, returning by the Northern route. The season will last fifty-two weeks. The street parade will be very elaborate, employing thirty-five men, headed by a band of eighteen pieces. All the costumes and scenery are new, and the co. will travel in a private car, enjoying all the comforts of home.

O. H. last week and seemed to thoroughly please, the duels being well fought by Lee Hickman and Sam Bransky. Esther Reed sang the introductions nicely.—Valerie Bergere made fourteen hits with Grace Griswold's capital sketch, Billy's First Love, and Lew Sully made his usual hit.—Mayme Kelso, of Kelso and Sterling, won applause with her fine contralto voice.—Barney Fagin and Henrietta Byron and the Esmeralda Sisters were also favorites. O. L. COLBURN.

BOSTON, MASS.—Henry E. Dixey and the Fadettes Orchestra divide the honors at Keith's this week. Others are Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Drew, Francis Gerard, Fisher and Carroll, the Woodwards, Italian Trio, the Masses, Claflin Sisters, Joe Edmonds, and the biograph.——The Four Emperors of Music are the leaders in the long bill at the Howard Athenaeum, which includes Bellecaire Brothers, J. Bernard Dyllyn, Radford and Winchester, Toledo and Price, Mr. and Mrs. Larry Shaw, Adams and White, Louis Powers, Somers and Wible, Mason and Lee, F. Alan Coogan, Siddon Brothers, and Scott and Johnson.——Miner's New American Burlesquers are at the Palace, with Palfrey and Barton, Richy W. Craig, and Lola Biggar, who is well remembered for her attractive appearance in Prince Pro Tem and other operas.——The Fay Foster Burlesque co. at the Lyceum has in its ollo Lucie Dacre, Zoe Mathews, Eddie Burns, Bertino and Walters, Cunningham and Smith, and Arthur Yule.——In the bill at Austin and Stone's are Ned Nelson, Conlan and Russell, the Blanchards, Pas Ma La Trio, Tirrell and Weston, the Morton Sisters, Egbert and Hanson, Hyland and Dayton, Easler and Pierce, the Horton Duo, Gardner, West and Sunshine, and Howard Brothers.——At Norumbega Park Bonita and her pickaninnies head the bill, which includes Eldorado Sisters, the Thornes, and Kieth's dogs.——At Medford Boulevard Frederick Brothers and Burns, Bennett and Rich, Henella, Prentice Trio, Arvello, and Kennedy and Evans are in the bill.——Crescent Gardens present this week the Mozart Comedy Four, Wells and Wells, Emerson and Omega, Nevell and Stelle, Conway and Killeen, Tanner and Gilbert.——Lexington Park has this week Klein, Ott Brothers and Nickerson, Pearl Danforth, Morse Brothers, and Fredericks and Don.——Point of Pines this week has Gardner and Maddern, Anderson and Briggs, Fowley and Dunn, and the Lynn Cadet Band. There was not a large attendance when the locomotive collision finally took place here. It was a great success as a sensation.——There has been no end of confusion in booking this week, and the man who followed the theatre ads as gospel truth found the same turns booked at two remote houses this week in at least six cases.——Keith's will draw all the old patrons of the Castle Square, for Lillian Lawrence and John Craig will take their leave of the East there in the balcony scene of Romeo and Juliet. They go to California for the Winter. JAY BENTON.

ST. LOUIS, MO.—Eva Mudge is the Forest Park Highlands' headliner. She is a great favorite and the reception accorded her was very hearty. With her are Lew Hawkins, Devlin's Zouaves, Nora Bayes and Al. Fields, and Roattino and Stevens. Captain Impudence, with Ervin Blunkall, Lillian Atwood, and Edith Pritchett in the cast, was the opening bill. The experiment will be watched with interest. Since the destruction by fire of Delmar's Garden the Summer supply of stock has run rather low in this town.——Rush's Bon Ton Burlesquers are holding forth at the Standard.——At Mannion's Park Raymond Teal, Lynch and Jewell, and the Lemoines are appearing to pleased audiences.——Many neat attractions make up the West End Heights bill this week. NEW HAVEN, CONN.—Poli's Wonderland (S. Z. Poli, mgr.): The Wonderland has been thoroughly renovated and will open on Labor Day. Mr. Poli's booking agent has returned from a European tour and tells me that many novelties have been booked. Mr. Poli has added Springfield, Mass., to his circuit, taking a ten years' lease of the Grand Opera House in that city, with the privilege of extending it for another ten years. The interior of the house will be torn out and brought down to the ground floor. The appointments within will be the most modern that can be procured and high-class vaudeville will be offered. Mr. Poli now controls, besides his house in this city, one in Bridgeport, one in Hartford, two in Waterbury and the new venture in Springfield. Mr. Poli will begin alterations at once and hopes to open in October. Mr. and Mrs. Poli are still at the Pequot, New London, and recently had Lew Dockstader as a guest. JANE MARLIN.

The theatre has been renovated and greatly improved, making it one of the most comfortable and cheery places of amusement in the State. Owing to illness, Resident Manager H. B. Nichols was unable to attend the opening and receive the magnificent basket of flowers presented to him by his numerous friends. Business Manager Joe Sheridan, of the City Sports, made the presentation speech, and General Manager Buck, of the theatre, responded on behalf of Mr. Nichols, after which the flowers were sent to his home. Blue Ribbon Girls 25-27. CHARLES N. PHELPS.

OSCAR SIDNEY FRANK.

American School of PLAYWRITING (FOURTH YEAR.)

Conducted by W. T. PRICE AND ASSOCIATES.

"But to write and read comes by NATURE."—DOGBERRY, IN "MUCH ADO ABOUT NOTHING." Are you a Dogberry? Playwriting is an ART and has to be learned; if you do not know the Art, you are wasting time in writing in competition with those who DO KNOW. It takes ten or twenty years to learn untaught. Are your years worth nothing? Taught by a specially devised system of written exercises BY MAIL. No book ever written on the Drama is more than an introduction to the study as pursued in a practical way in this school. Monthly payments. If the study as here pursued does not fascinate you, you may drop out at any time. You may begin at any time. Special rates to clubs of two or three, bringing the study within the reach of those who cannot bear the slight expense singly. All plays reaching a certain standard are printed, without outlay by the student, for purposes of better copyright, submission to managers, and the record of the school. All such PRINTED plays, if not disposed of to managers, for whom the school primarily exists, will eventually be produced by the school, as it matures and gets on that footing which it will inevitably attain. Explanatory circular. Address

BELASCO THEATRE.

New York, August 30, 1904.

TO WHOM IT MAY CONCERN:

It having come to my knowledge that members of the Theatrical Trust, through their advance agents and representatives, have been active in spreading so-called "information," false "news," and malicious statements concerning my players and myself, with the declared purpose of injuring, in advance, the business of my attractions, I take this means to inform all newspaper men and theatrical managers, throughout the country, of certain facts:

These members of the Theatrical Trust, never daring to fight in the open, and true to their practice and reputation to make war upon women, have lately chosen Mrs. Leslie Carter and Miss Blanche Bates as their favorite objects of attack. Failing in efforts to tempt either away from my management, they have sought, by surreptitious methods, to spread reports prejudicial to the professional standing of these artists and the success of their plays, with the avowed intent of compelling my surrender to the Trust, or forcing me from my profession.

I shall not surrender, nor will I be "driven out of the business" (as they are pleased to put it). As the above mentioned reports have been invariably false, I respectfully ask that in the future the editors of all newspapers, and theatrical managers, will regard as authoritative and true only such news, concerning my players and enterprises, as may be issued officially by my accredited agents or from the offices of the Belasco Theatre, New York.

Faithfully yours,

David Belasco.
